CHIEF OF POLICE COLSON, GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American:

'VERY SURE I HAVE MARVIN BOY'

HUNDREDS SEE GIRL CRUSHED

Commuters Faint as Suburban Express Mangles to Death Young Woman.

TRAPPED AT END OF LANE

Powerless to save her, 300 persons, horror-stricken, saw sixteen-year-old Agnes Gorrie, of No. 515 Geneva avenue, mangled by a Shawmut train of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad at the Fields Corner station early to-day.

She was hurried to the City Hospital in a Station 11 ambulance, but died before she could be placed on the operating table.

The girl lost her life in trying to cross the tracks from a private lane over which she daily reached the station from her home on Geneva avenue, hurrying to meet a girl chum.

There are no gates on the private way and many persons who have taken this short cut to the station have had narrow escapes from death.

Railroad Refused Gates.

Citizens have advocated the placing of gates at the end of the way which ends at the tracks, but the railroad did not see that gates were necessary and the city of Boston did not take any action because the road is not city property.

The only warning, for persons who use the lane, of trains is a large gong which ordinarily sounds so loudly that it drowns the noise of the trains.

Miss Gorrie had only a few minutes in which to get the train from her home this morning and by several persons was seen running up the private way.

When she was almost to the tracks a man who was standing at the track end of the way who saw the train approaching, warned her not to cross the rails, but she saw a friend, Cecelia Gilmartin, standing on the station platform and ran in her direction.

Halted Between Tracks.

She did not see the train approaching until it was within a few feet of her. Terror stricken she paused between the rails and a second later was struck by the engine. For several yards she was carried by the cowcatcher and then rolled under the wheels.

Immediately there was almost a panic. Several women fainted and had to be carried into the station, where they were attended by physicians. Others became hysterical and had to be led away by men who remained calm.

Mangled by Three Cars.

Eye witnesses of the accident say that three cars passed over Miss Gorrie and and when she was dragged from beneath the wheels she was unconscious and bleeding from many wounds. Her skull was fractured and her left foot torn off.

A doctor who was on the train said that she was dead, but Cecelia Gilmartin thought that she detected a flicker of life and insisted that other physicians be called.

Dr. Charles Malus of Dorchester avenue was summoned and decided that Miss Gorrie still lived. By his order she was taken to the City Hospital.

The ambulance made a record breaking run, but the moment theg irl was carried into the hospital the doctors saw that she could not live.

She died without regaining consciousness.

Shrieks Warned Engineer.

The engineer of the train says that he did not see the girl until on the tracks and did not know that she was under the wheels until told by his fireman who had heard the shrieks of the women on the station platform.

Miss Gorrie was one of the most popular girls of the Geneve avenue district. For some time, since the death of her mother she had supported herself by working in a Boston business establishment.

CHUM TELLS HOW SHE SAW GIRL DIE

This is the pathetic story of Miss Cecilia Gilmartin, the girl chum of Agnes Gorrie, who saw her friend hit by an incoming train at Fields Corner and fatally injured. The victim of the accident was crossing the track to meet her chum when the train hit her.

By Cecilia Gilmartin.

Oh, poor Agnes. If she hadn't tried to cross the track to speak to me she never would have been struck. She always used to go in on the train with me, and this morning when she saw me on the opposite platform as she came running along to get the train she smiled and came running over to me.

If poor Agnes hadn't looked at the train when she was crossing the track she never would have been hit. But she looked, and, O God, when she saw how close it was to her she stood still right in the path. I never shall forget it. My heart jumped almost to my mouth and my blood ran cold as I saw she was going to be struck. I turned away my head and then I heard the women scream and saw them rush into the station, and I knew she was hit.

I ran over to the fence where poor Agnes was thrown and I saw her poor little body all bruised and crushed and torn. I cried: "Agnes, dear, speak to me, don't you know Celia?" But she didn't answer. They took her into the station and then they told me that she was dying. O, poor girl, the best friend I ever had, what a shame that she had to die that way.

There was no use trying to help her. It was all so sudden, that there was no chance to pull her from the tracks. I would have done it myself, but it was too late when I saw what was going to happen.

Description of Child Found in a New York City Identical With That of Kidnapped Delaware Boy—Relative on Way for Identification.

The BOSTON AMERICAN learned to-day that a child supposed to be little Horace Marvin, the son of Dr. Horace N. Marvin of Kitts Hammock, Del., who was kidnapped from his home nearly seven weeks ago, had been found by Chief of Police Colson of Gloversville, N. Y., and that a man and woman giving their names as Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Adams were with him at the time. Adams is in custody, and the woman, who claims to be his wife, is under police survillance.

The BOSTON AMERICAN to-day called up Chief Colson by long distance telephone and the conversation follows:

BY LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

Q.—Is that Police Chief Colson? A.—It is.

Q.—Chief, are you certain that the child you have found there is little Horace Marvin, the kidnapped boy? A.—I am not positive, but feel very confident that I have the kidnapped child here.

Q.—How do you know this? A.—The child answers the description of the Marvin boy very closely.

Q.—Will you please give the BOSTON AMERICAN a description of the boy you have found there.

A.—He is three feet one inch in height; is about four years old; I have not weighed him; he has light brown hair, combed straight down over the forehead to the eyes; has large, wide-open blue eyes; his complexion is light, as though suggesting rigid confinement recently. There is a small scar over one eye, I don't remember which.

Q.—Have you communicated with the fathr? A.—I have telegraphed him and sent a picture of the child taken by a detective.

Q.—What was Dr. Marvin's answer. A.—Dr. Marvin to-day telegraphed me: "Hold man and boy; sending Standish. Will arrive this morning." Dr. Myles Standish is Dr. Marvin's brother-in-law.

"IT'S ALL UP, IT'S ALL UP."

Q.—Where is the man Adams you arrested? A.—I have him in custody. I was with him all night. He was arrested yesterday on a charge of peddling without a license. To-day I told him what he was charged with.

Q.—How did he act and what did he say? A.—He grew excited at once and leaped to his feet, saying: "It's all up, it's all up. The expected has hapened." Then he sort of braced up and said: "It's all a lie. The boy is mine. I can prove that. I can show you the house and room where he was born." Then he shut up and wouldn't say anything more.

Q.—Do you think you've got Horace Marvin's kidnapper? A.—Yes, I do. The man acted very strangely. He walked up and down the room and seemed worked up. I believe I have the right man.

Q.—Did his words seem to you like a confession of guilt? A.—Yes, they did. He acted like a guilty man.

Q.—Where is the Mrs. Adams? A.—She is at the house of M. W. Lent, where she was before I arrested the man.

Q.—Where is the child thought to be Horace Marvin. A.—He is with the woman.

Q.—Is she under surveillance? A.—The sharpest kind. She cannot move without it being known.

SAID HIS NAME WAS "CHUBBY."

Q.—Have you talked with the child? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he tell you anything? A.—Nothing of importance.

Q.—Who did he tell what his name was? A.—He told that to a Mrs. Young of South Main street, the wife of a carpenter, with whom he ate several meals. He was a pet at the house, and Mr. Young worked in that block and grew to know the little

MASTER TEAMSTERS WAVER; CRISIS NEAR

UNION DRIVERS SEE STRIKE TRIUMPH IN LATEST DEVELOPMENTS.

A crisis is at hand in the strike of Teamdrivers' Union No. 25.

Men closely connected with the master teamsters, but whose names obviously cannot be made public, declared to-day that if one or two of the big trucking firms which are trying to break the strike would break away the others would be glad to follow them.

The financial assistance which the big trucking firms have been receiving in their fight on the Teamdrivers' Union is failing them, and, it is said, their backers consider further outlay of cash foolhardy.

Officials of the Teamdrivers' Union to-day declare that the strike has practically been won. They point out that this has been a most unusual strike so far. Not a single act of lawlessness nor violence has been charged to the strikers, while several strike-breakers have been arrested for acts of violence.

Merchants in Protest.

The merchants of Boston are loud in their outcry against some of the methods pursued by the master teamsters. At first many merchants were disposed to side with the employing teamsters, but as the strike progressed and they found that the teaming contractors were making no progress in the way of delivering goods, they have protested louder and louder.

Many Boston merchants are to-day considering transferring their contracts to the firms which employ union drivers. The example set by the Philadelphia Steamship Company in taking away its work from the Hilliards is not forgotten.

The teamsters and helpers who formerly worked for J. S. Hilliard & Sons in the work of forwarding the freight from the Philadelphia line docks have all been employed by P. O'Riordan & Sons of Charlestown, to whom the contract for this work has been awarded. To-day the union men who formerly worked on the dock at India wharf are hard at work at their old jobs under new bosses. Five policemen stationed there have nothing to do.

Say Many Strikers Working.

The strikers say that a large percentage of the men formerly employed by the eight big trucking firms have got jobs and are working every day.

Talk of a general strike is still rife. The strikers are to hold a big mass meeting to-morrow in Brodbine Hall, Dover and Albany streets, and at this meeting the subject of a general strike will undoubtedly be discussed. Many conservative strikers are to-day pointing to the fact that they do not think that a general strike will be necessary or even advisable.

Arbitration is now being talked of. It is declared that if the right persons would take a hand that several of the master teamsters would be glad to consent to have the differences between them and the drivers settled by disinterested persons.

Few non-union drivers are arriving in the city.

To-day Fifield, Richardson & Co. got out ten teams with twenty men; Flanders & Co., fifteen teams and thirty men; J. S. Hilliard & Sons, eight teams with eighteen men; Johnson & Co., ten teams with twenty men; Presby & Co., three teams with seven men, and the Boston Forwarding & Transportation Company, six teams with fifteen men.

JOHN D. THREATENS TO SUE IMPERSONATOR

Despite warning from Rockefeller's lawyer, Butler Haviland in Boston will to-morrow night present sketch based on an incident in the oil king's life, appearing in the title role cleverly "made up" to represent that famed millionaire.

BUTLER HAVILAND, WHO PORTRAYS JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

JOHN D. MAKES THREAT TO SUE BOSTON ACTOR

Butler Haviland's Sketch and Impersonation of Oil King Rouses John D.'s Ire.

HE WILL RISK LITIGATION

For the first time in his life John D. Rockefeller is to be quite extensively impersonated as his own, personal self tomorrow on a Boston stage, despite warning which his attorney has issued against the production.

The portrayal is to be made by Butler Haviland, of the Lothrop stock company, in a sketch Mr. Haviland has just written, entitled "The Mighty Dollar: An Episode in the Life of the Oil King."

When he had the sketch written Mr. Haviland mailed a copy of the manuscript and a set of photographs of himself in the character of Rockefeller to Mr. Rockefeller himself, thinking the latter might be interested.

Sketch's First Presentation.

The result exceeded Haviland's expectation, for he received by return mail an emphatic note from Mr. Rockefeller's legal representative. The letter said that Mr. Rockefeller had a right to his own personality, and trusted that Mr. Haviland would see the matter in the same light and not force the writer to further action.

With this cheerful prospect of Rockefeller litigation, Mr. Haviland is going ahead with the sketch, which is first presented in the Sunday concert at the Bowdoin Square Theatre to-morrow night.

Mr. Haviland has given Mr. Rockefeller's counsel's reply into the hands of Attorney Walter F. Brownell, of the Tremont building, Mr. Haviland's personal counsel.

Mr. Haviland met Mr. Rockefeller seven years ago at the Hygeia Hotel, Old Point Comfort.

"You understand," says Haviland, 'that I didn't know Mr. Rockefeller intimately, but several of us men at the hotel were introduced to him at the informal gatherings there. Well, ever since that time I've had an idea I'd like to put on a Rockefeller sketch, and now I've got it."

Thought Skit Inoffensive.

At the opening of the sketch Haviland makes a few jabs at Rockefeller. But the general spirit of the skit is kindly enough, showing the Oil King as a man moved by the plea of a little girl of the slums.

Under the presumption that the sketch, as a whole, would be inoffensive to Mr. Rockefeller, Haviland wrote him a letter. It follows:

> John D. Rockefeller, Esq.
>
> Dear Mr. Rockefeller: I trust you will pardon the liberty I take in forwarding for your inspection the accompanying MSS. and photos.
>
> Since I had the pleasure of meeting you at Old Point Comfort, Va., in the Spring of 1900, I have had in mind the idea of producing a little dramatic offering in which I could impersonate you. I think you will admit, after looking over the enclosed photos, that—so far as outward appearance goes—I have not been entirely unsuccessful.
>
> If you will do me the favor to read the MSS., you will find that I do not descend to burlesque or caricature, but, in fact, present my hero as a very large-hearted man.
>
> I should deeply appreciate a line from you, with your opinion of my effort. Very sincerely yours,
>
> J. BUTLER HAVILAND.
>
> Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston.

Right to Own Personality.

April 12 Haviland received a note from the Rockefeller attorney which Haviland quotes, as nearly as he can recollect, as follows:

"Your communication has been placed in my hands by Mr. Rockefeller. It has been decided at law that every man has a right to his own personality. While your sketch is not a libel, it is much against Mr. Rockefeller's wish that any such thing be placed on the stage. Trusting that you will see the matter in the right light, and not force any further action, I am yours very truly, etc."

The part to which Mr. Rockefeller is thought to object to is contained in the following soliloquy by Mr. Haviland as the Oil King in the opening of the sketch:

Oil King's Soliloquy.

"Now, let me see. Amalgamated at 58 and Standard Oil still at 56. Tut-tut! That will never do. I have remained passive long enough. Rogers must now do my bidding. Old as I am they will yet learn that this brain has not lost its cunning—and as for that whipper-snapper in Boston, I'll make him rue the day he entered the lists against me. They shall all realize that Standard Oil rules the world—and that I—I, am Standard Oil."

Bell rings—"What's that, another of those idiotic reporters, I suppose, seeking my opinion of the next Presidential campaign. Fools—fools—fools! It matters not who the man is, or may be. He is ours—ours—body and soul."

Then Lizzie Hicks comes in. Lizzie is a little girl of the slums, portrayed by Miss Alice Thornton, also of the Lothrop stock company. Lizzie brings along Bedelia, her rag roll, a "phoney doll," as Bedelia later tells John D., but, nevertheles, very precious to Lizzie.

Touched by Little Girl's Plea.

The girl has "butted in," as she expresses it, in behalf of a doctor, who has befriended her and whose note Rockefeller holds for "t'ree t'ousan' bucks." After a dialogue of much human interest the child of the slums wins her way into the heart of the Oil King, and accomplishes real wonders.

John D. Rockefeller has been portrayed on the Boston stage before, but never in such an intimate manner as this sketch calls for. Charles Leonard Fletcher and Henry Lee, the impersonators, have represented Mr. Rockefeller in make-up, but not in speaking parts. In "The Vanderbilt Cup" he was represented. And in "The Lion and the Mouse" it was well understood that Charles Klein had the man Rockefeller in mind for "The Lion."

But thtis is the first time that an actor has come out as Rockefeller, using that majestic name and attempting to put the living man on the stage in extended lines and actions.

SHAKE ROBERTS' TESTIMONY IN MURDER TRIAL

Special to the Boston American.

HOULTON, Me., April 20.—Under the severe cross-examination of Attorney-General Hamlin, John E. Roberts, on trial for the murder of Edgar Dickinson, was forced to admit that on one occasion he had been at Dickinson's house when Mr. Dickinson and his son were away. That was in September, 1906, the month before the murder.

Roberts became so mixed in his testimony that he several times contradicted his own testimony given on Thursday.

"Have you ever been alone with Mrs. Dickinson when she was away from the house?"

"No, sir."

He denied vehemently each instance that the attorney general brought up from testimony of witnesses who said they had seen him with Mrs. Dickinson.

Takes Up Old Crime.

Abruptly the attorney general turned from this line of questioning and asked, "Did you know John McIlwee?"

"I have seen him."

"Do you know where he was shot?"

Mr. Shaw objected and the question was withdrawn.

One of the witnesses testified that Roberts said that they never found out who shot John McIlwee, and they wouldn't find out who shot Ed. Dickinson.

"Did you say to Mr. Brown what he testified you did about John McIlwee?"

"I don't remember."

"Were you at Peleg White's camp the Tuesday before Mr. Dickinson was shot?"

"I don't remember."

Roberts on Thursday had clearly told all his movements from the Sunday before to the Thursday of Mr. Dickinson's death.

When Roberts left the stand he was trembling so that he had to clutch the sides of the pen. He looked tired and worn out. Once a woman passing smiled at him, but he never looked at her.

Trace Roberts's Movements.

Holman Clark, who lives near the Dickinsons, said he saw Roberts on both Monday and Tuesday morning near his house. Roberts said on Tuesday that he was going to Duck Pond, and started in that direction. On Wednesday morning, the day the prosecution places Roberts in Island Falls, Clark testified Roberts passed by on his way to either the Sewall house or Duck Pond.

On Tuesday Mrs. Bertha Sewall gave Roberts a red band for his hat. He was going into the woods and feared he might be mistaken for a deer and get shot.

These witnesses and Ivery M. Hovery were put on to corroborate Roberts story of what he did on these days.

R. A. Nixon, Henry C. Sharpe, Mrs. Celia McNinch of Bridgewater, Will McNinch, Sanford Dyer, Hugh Miller and Marvin Small of Monticello were put on to say that Roberts bore a good reputation.

11 THAW JURORS WILL HOLD REUNION TO-NIGHT

JUROR PFAFF, WHO MADE THE SENSATIONAL CHARGES AGAINST STEELE, NOT EXPECTED.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The members of the Thaw jury will hold a reunion at the Broadway Central Hotel to-night.

Juror Pfaff is the only member of the jury who will not be present at the festivities, and it was regarded as somewhat significant yesterday, considering the trouble that occurred between him and some of the other jurors, that he should have gone out of town on the eve of the reunion.

Wilbur F. Steele, juror No. 9, with whom Pfaff almost came to blows, smiled sardonically yesterday when asked if he thought Pfaff would attend the feast.

"I don't know," was his reply. "But all of the others will be there, I am sure."

Steele called on Jerome yesterday and chatted with him for an hour.

"I thought I would call on Mr. Jerome," said he, "just as I called on Mr. Delmas. I had never seen either. I particularly wanted to explain to Mr. Jerome how untruthful the statements were about my having had business relations with the late William Thaw. I never knew any of the Thaws, nor even heard of them until the shooting of Stanford White, and if any one has any information to the contrary I invite them to make it public."

The situation with regard to Harry Thaw's counsel remains unchanged. Thaw seems to be dominating it and while the names of Abraham Levy and other well-known criminal lawyers are mentioned as possible successors to Delmas, Thaw has made no definite selection. Hartridge called at the Tombs yesterday, but, learning that Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was with her husband, went away and did not return. Later in the day Peabody called, but no statements were given out for publication. Dan O'Reilly did not see his client until late in the day. He announced that there was nothing new.

KIDNAPPED MARVIN BOY FOUND AT LAST

fellow. He told Mrs. Young his name at home was "Chubby," but that the Adamses called him "Pete."

Q.—Can you tell me anything more about the child? A.—He told Mrs. Young that his mother was dead. He told her that Adams was not his father. He acts as though afraid of this couple. When he is with them he does what they want and makes no trouble, but when they are away from him he doesn't want to see them again. He likes the man the least.

The persons who have had the child in their possession go under the name of Mr. and Mrs. N. H. Adams. They arrived here last Monday and have been under police surveillance since Wednesday. The man attempted to leave town last night, but was arrested and detained on a technical charge.

From letters and papers in Adams's possession the police have learned that in the last few months he has travelled 2,500 miles, to New York city and Brooklyn, through Connecticut into Canada and back through the district of Glens Falls and Mechanicsville.

Adams told the police that the boy's name is Lowell and that he is their only child. The child says the woman he is with is not his mother.

When Adams and his wife came to town they took rooms with a blind man by the name of M. W. Lent, at the corner of School and West Fulton streets. The attention of the police was attracted to them first early yesterday morning by a visit which they received from a man who is a stranger here. A patrolman saw this man tiptoeing out of the hallway of the flat building in which Adams has rooms at 5 a. m.

SEND PHOTO TO FATHER.

On Wednesday Captain Colson saw Mrs. Adams leave the house with the boy. He shadowed her for two hours, and every move the woman made, the police captain asserts, convinced him that something was wrong. Several persons noticed the likeness of the child to the published pictures of the Marvin boy and comented on it to the captain.

The detectives, with a photographer, invited the boy into a hallway to see them "shoot birds" and thus obtained the negative. The picture was sent to the father on Thursday, with a careful description of the boy. Yesterday the police received the following from Dr. Marvin:

"It looks like my boy. Description is perfect. Have sent Standish to identify him."

Adams was taken into custody as he was about to board a train for Johnstown. He told the police that he had intended to go to Utica to-day, where there would be money waiting him and that from there he intended to go to Cleveland. The last letter demanding ransom was mailed to Dr. Marvin from Cleveland.

NO DOUBT, SAYS CHIEF.

Mrs. Adams, in a conversation with Mrs. Lent, yesterday made the statement that her husband expected to get $10,000 in a few days.

OLD EARTH ILL WITH AGUE OF EARTHQUAKES

NEW YORK, April 20.—Old Mother Earth is ill with the ague. This has been manifested in the numerous severe and minor earthquake and seismic disturbances reported from all parts of the world during the last few weeks. Following the "chills" which have shaken and cracked the earth's crust have been hurricanes and tornadoes which have added their share to the general damage.

Scientists whose attention have been directed to the subject by the rapid succession of earthquakes in Mexico, Spain, eastern South America and in Charleston, N. C., explain that the earth is passing through a period of unusual instability.

Widely Differing Views.

Whether further "brain storms" of the earth threaten danger to the more thickly populated portions of the world is a subject on which the seismologists differ widely. One set of scientists believes a universal disaster is imminent, while another group fears no such calamity, although agreeing other slight seismic disturbances are possible.

Dr. John N. Clarke, State geologist of New York, says the entire Atlantic coast is by no means safe, although he admits the shocks generally follow the newer mountain ranges of the Pacific.

26 Inches Since Dec. 3.

Records show that since December 3 there have been twenty-six earthquakes. Added to these disasters in the same period, several hurricanes have occurred; a typhoon, on Good Friday, swept over the Caroline Islands, killing 230 of the 800 inhabitants of the Ululthi group; the Gulf of Mexico was recently turned into a "boiling pot" during the Mexican earthquake and the steamer La Provence, which arrived to-day from Europe, encountered a wierd electrical hurricane attributed to the seismic disturbances.

Scientists show that there are two great earthquake zones about the earth in which 94 percent of the shocks occur.

Two Unstable Belts.

One of these belts swings roughly east and west through the Mediterranean region, Asia Minor, the Caucuses, Himalayas, East Indies, Central America and West Indies. It catches 53 per cent. of the quakes. The other belt circles the Pacific Ocean, passing along the Andes, up the west coast of North America, across to Asia, down through Kamchatka, the Japanese and Philippine Islands, extending to New Zealand. Forty-one per cent. of the shocks occur in this zone.

The thickly populated sections of the world, embracing a surface twenty times that of the two earthquake zones, receives only 6 per cent. of the shocks.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD GIRL RUN OVER BY AUTO

FITCHBURG, April 20.—Five-year-old Lena Robichaud of No. 129 Fairmount street was run over last night by an automobile owned by Hon. W. H. Lowe and driven by his chauffeur, and seriously injured. Her father, who is a physician, removed her to her home, where she is in a critical condition.

THREATEN TO BURN HOME, KIDNAP BABY

PITTSFIELD, April 20.—Pittsfield is stirred by a black hand letter received by Mrs. Fred Friedrich, wife of a prominent German marketman of North street which threatens the kidnapping of Mrs. Friedrich's pretty six-year-old daughter and the destruction of the Friedrich home by fire if $250 is not left in a place designated in the letter. The police are now guarding the Friedrich home.

The letter was received by Mrs. Friedrich Wednesday morning and, fearing that the threats contained in it would be carried out, she immediately communicated with the police. Chief White did not take the matter seriously at first, but he has yielded to the pleadings of the frightened woman and has sent officers to guard her home night and day.

Threaten Kidnapping.

The Black Hand letter reads as follows:

> NOTICE.
>
> We want you to comply with this our request. We want you to bring $250 in cash three blocks west of Brown street near the fire station house on Tyler street by Wednesday night or Thursday evening at the latest.
>
> If we don't meet you there put it in the hall under the radiator or out in the trench near the firehouse.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN OFFERS BOWLER BAIL

A fashionably gowned, attractive woman, apparently younger than thirty and giving every evidence of wealth and the position it commands, is seeking Sheriff Seavy of Suffolk County to make arrangements for furnishing $15,000 bail for George P. Bowler, a former Harvard student held for trial on charges of forgery and uttering promissory notes.

The woman, so she told Police Inspector Harry Pierce, is Mrs. Steven Reynolds of New York. It is thought by the headquarters men, who are familiar with Boston people, that she is connected with the Stevens family which figure prominently in Boston society.

The aristocratic appearance of the woman, the extraordinary large bail she wishes to furnish for Bowler and the prominence of the Bowler case itself from a social and a collegiate standpoint make this visitor one of the most interesting that has been seen at Pemberton square in a long time.

George P. Bowler was arrested in New York April 6 for the Boston police. He was indicted last October for forging the name of his brother, Robert P. Bowler, to four notes aggregating $14,400.

These notes, it is alleged, were tendered to Bernard (Poco) Bennett, the Harvard money lender, who cashed them. Bowler was extradited.

Last Wednesday he was held in Boston Municipal Court for trial and bail was set at $15,000. In default of this Bowler was committed to the Charles street jail.

To-day the sylishly gowned Mrs. Reynolds, who is so interested in Bowler, came to police headquarters in a cab. She seemed to be posted on the Bowler case, for she asked for Inspector Pierce, who brought Bowler back from New York.

She told Pierce she wished he would go to the Charles street jail with her and show her how to make arrangements for bailing out Bowler.

The inspector tild her he could not go to the jail with her. He advised her to go to the office of Sheriff Seavey of Suffolk County in the Law Courts building opposite headquarters.

EDITOR STEAD IN BOSTON TO PLEAD PEACE

Editor William T. Stead of London, the distinguished British publisher, arrived in Boston to-day to attend the peace meeting which takes place to-morrow afternoon in the Park Street Church under the direction of the United Society of Christian Endeavor.

Mr. Stead was one of the speakers at the peace congress just closed in New York and is scheduled for the principal address at the Boston meeting.

During his stay in Boston he is the guest of M. H. Gulesian, an Armenian dealer in cornices and metal work, who lives at Chestnut Hill. Mr. Stead has been one of the foremost in advocating reforms in the oppressed Armenian districts in Turkey.

This afternoon Mr. Stead attends a meeting of the Twentieth Century Club. Later he will visit the Economic Club and will also be entertained at a dinner at the Victorian Club. It is expected he will speak at all three gatherings.

How to Get Rid of Fat

A Trial Box Sent Free.

A quick, harmless reducer of fat has come into popular use which far eclipses any method or treatment heretofore used.

Starvation diets break down the health almost invariably, as is commonly witnessed among many former fat folks who have tried to starve their fat away.

You Eat Rengo Like You Would Fruit or Candy.

In their stead many physicians are now prescribing Rengo, which among other things contains the extracts of some tropical fruits, and which has a remarkable faculty not only of reducing the fat quickly and in a natural way, but also makes the nerves strong, digestion vigorous and muscles more brawny, leaving what once was a weak, blubbery, bloated victim of fat, a normal, vigorous, muscular person.

Rengo has the faculty of compelling proper assimilation of food and driving off the surplus abnormal tissue present.

Thus, no tiresome exercises are necessary and there is no interference with one's daily labors.

Rengo is very pleasant to take, and it is chewed like candy. It attacks abnormal tissue with unerring accuracy, and causes a gradual, harmless but effective reduction in weight, and without leaving wrinkles which are nearly always present after taking drugs and other dangerous materials commonly called "anti-fats."

There is only one company in the United States making this remedy and that is the Rengo Company at Detroit, Mich. For some time they have made it a practice of sending out trial boxes of this remarkable treatment to anyone who sends them their name and address.

We recommend that any one suffering from excess fat, prove to his or her own satisfaction what this powerful product can do, and just send for a box on trial. Address The Rengo Co.

3 HUB GIRLS TO MAKE THEATRE BOW IN 'CLEO'

Will Appear with Nance O'Neil, Whom World Regards as Boston Discovery.

STUDIED HARD FOR STAGE

Three talented, attractive Boston girls are to make their stage debuts Monday evening in support of Nance O'Neil, the tragedienne, who has been heralded all over the world as a Boston discovery.

They are Evelyn Marriott, Blanche Dana and Eleanor Francis, and the opportunity to thus make their collective debut in their home city comes as a result of their admiration for Miss O'Neil and an acquaintance that grew out of one of her previous appearances here.

It was she who advised them to study for the stage. They went to New York, lived together and became veritable "grinds." When it was announced recently that Miss O'Neil was selected to play the tile role in Edwin Milton Royle's "Cleo," vice Mrs. Leslie Carter, declined, the trio of embryo actresses wrote to her, asking for auxiliary places with the company.

Upon Miss O'Neil's indorsement Charles Dillingham selected these Boston girls, and they will appear as young ladies of quality in the drawing-room scene of the new play, which has its first Boston presentation at the Park on Monday evening.

MILLIONAIRE IN DISGRACE TRIES SUICIDE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Benedict Gimbel, Philadelphia millionaire, and member of the firm of Gimbel Brothers, who was arrested in New York, Thursday, on a grave charge and who made extraordinary efforts to buy his release through bribery, was found supposedly dying from self-inflicted wounds, on the floor of his room in an obscure hotel in Hoboken last night.

"I will kill myself rather than face my family and friends in Philadelphia," Gimbel had dramatically exclaimed when begging Assistant District Attorney Krotel to save him from disgrace. No man ever made a more determined effort to carry such a threat into execution. When he was released from the Tombs Thursday night on bail furnished by men whose identity was kept secret, he went away with his counsel, "Dan" O'Reilly. On leaving O'Reilly he said he was going to take a train for Philadelphia. Instead, he went to Hoboken and registered at the Palace Hotel under an assumed name. He spent the night and day alone and finally he resorted to an attack on his veins and arteries with a jagged piece of heavy chinaware broken from a water pitcher.

Tried to Drown Himself.

Weakened and exhausted from the loss of blood, the death he was courting did not come quickly enough to satisfy him and he made a final attempt to drown himself in a bathtub full of water.

In his weakened condition he fell to the floor of the bathroom and the noise of his fall betrayed him in his pursuit of death. The physicians at St. Mary's Hospital, Hoboken, who bent every effort to aid Gimbel, say that only a miracle can save his life.

Under Assumed Name.

Gimbel registered as "Richard Helveridge, Trenton, N. J.," and was assigned to a small room with a small bathroom adjoining it.

Not a sound was heard from the room all night, and until late yesterday afternoon. Gimbel was alone with his thoughts, and what torturing phantoms of the imagination visited him, and what efforts he made to keep them away, is his secret.

Shortly before 6 o'clock the sound as of a body falling heavily was heard in the room. The door was broken in, and it was found that Gimbel was lying on the bathroom floor, with a wound in his neck and another on his wrist. He was barely breathing.

Had Planned to Inhale Gas.

Lying on a table and partly on the floor were several rolls of absorbent cotton and surgeons' adhesive tape, Gimbel had decided to end his life, by passing peacefully away under the fumes of illuminating gas in some hotel. He had stopped all the cracks and crevices in the room with the cotton and tape, and was at work on a window, when he made the discovery that there was no gas turned on in the pipes in the rooms, and this easy path from the world was closed to him.

Gimbel's case was called in the Tombs Police Court to-day. Dan O'Reilly, his attorney, formally explained to Magistrate House the attempt Gimbel had made on his life and presented a certificate from the physicians at St. Mary's Hospital saying he was in a dangerous condition and could not possibly attend court.

After a short consultation with Assistant District Attorney Miner the magistrate continued the case until May 4.

Gimbel's bond was signed by Morris C. Lichten, said to be a millionaire, who gave his residence in East Seventy-sixth street, valued at $60,000, as security.

STORK TO BALK FIGHT FOR 'SILENT SMITH'S' ESTATE?

Probability of Posthumous Heir to Millionaire's Wealth Asserted by Widow's Friends.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—It is a little early for the mother, sisters and brother of James Henry Smith, who died in Japan, to gather for the purpose of disputing with his widow over the $50,000,000 or $75,000,000 which he left behind.

If there should be a posthumous heir or heiress, what then?

It is asserted by persons in this city who are in Mrs. Smith's confidence that such a complication is to be expected.

If Smith died childless and without expectation of lawful issue from his marriage with Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, whom he married after her divorce, there would be a likelihood that his relatives could contest with some chances of success a will leaving all his property to his bride widow.

If the blood relatives, dissatisfied with the size of their legacies, were to attempt to break the will, they would be "headed off" by the advent of an heir born after Mr. Smith's death.

Of course, unless the child lived, even for however brief a moment after birth, the position of the blood relatives and their chances of breaking a will which might not be deemed just to them would be as if the child were never born at all.

The birth of a child after the father's death would make no difference as to his or her rights.

It is understood by the friends of Lady Cooper, who has sailed for New York, and who is a sister of the late James Henry Smith, that the greater part of Mr. Smith's estate, which is reported here to amount to over $70,000,000, has been left to her. James Henry Smith and Lady Cooper were children of George S. Smith of Evanston, Ill., a cousin of George Smith, who left James Henry Smith a fortune of $50,00,000.

MAINE HONORS PATRIOTS OF '75

PORTLAND, Me., April 20.—Maine, which was a part of Massachusetts when the battles of Lexington and Concord were fought, yesterday celebrated its first Patriots' Day, the last Legislature having abolished Fast Day and substituted Patroits Day in its place.

The Maine Methodist conference met at Auburn and the Maine State Letter Carriers' Association and the Great Council of Improved Order of Redmen, which usually hold their meetings on Fast Day, met here. Forenoon and afternoon baseball games were played in this city and Colby and University of Maine played an exhibition game at Waterville.

DARING SAILOR REPLACES FLAG

Two thousand men, women and children were thrilled by the daring of William F. Lounder, an ex-sailor, as they watched him yesterday slowly climbing up a wet flagpole on the clubhouse of Colonel Fred B. Bogan Camp Fourteen, Spanish War Veterans, in Charlestown.

The camp was having a flag raising and when everything was ready to throw the eight-by-twelve color to the breeze an eyelet broke and the flag, together with 500 miniature ones, fell into the street.

As Lounder ascended, the pole swayed and many turned their heads away, afraid he would fall or the pole break.

When it seemed he could not go an inch higher, up he put his hand, seizing the end of the knotted rope and pulling it down so that the flag could again be attached. A mighty cheer went up for Lounder.

SEES DAUGHTER AFTER 19 YEARS

Special to the Boston American.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., April 20.—After a separation of nineteen years from his daughter, who had been told that her father was dead, Watson French is the happiest man in Vermont, for he has clasped once more in his arms his own flesh and blood.

Miss Lilla (French) Brand, was taken away from her father by her mother when the child was but three years old. Some years later, Lilla was informed that her father had "died in jail." The child lived for some years with the Shakers in Wilmington, Vt., and was later cared for in the Home for Little Wanderers, in Boston. A few years later, she was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. George Brand of Pawtucket, R. I. The girl's mother, and a brother and sister, have been living in Milford, Mass.

SENDING LIQUOR TO VT. ILLEGAL

Special to the Boston American.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., April 20.—In imposing a fine of $300 and costs upon Daniel Graham of this town, the Windham County Court has declared that the delivery of alcoholic liquors into the State of Vermont from other States is a violation of the Vermont laws. The decision is likely to have a far-reaching effect, as hundreds of carloads of liquor are shipped yearly from New England points into Vermont, and particularly from the State of Massachusetts.

Graham was charged with delivering liquor for the Crescent Bottling Company of North Walpole, N. H., to customers in Bellows Falls, Vt., and with violating the license laws in so doing.

FRAUD CHARGED IN LUMBER LAND TITLE

BOISE, Idaho, April 20.—The government has filed a suit in the United States Court here against the Barber Lumber Company to set aside 215 patents involving 40,000 acres of timber land in Boise County, worth $1,000,000. Fraud in securing title to the lands is alleged.

SWETTENHAM'S SPANKING BY ELGIN PRINTED

LONDON, April 20.—A white paper issued this evening contains a portion of the correspondence relating to the resignation of Sir Alexander Swettenham as Governor of Jamaica. It gives verbatim the letters of Rear Admiral Davis, U. S. N., and Sir Alexander, as detailed at the time, and the cabled comment of the Colonial Secretary, Lord Elgin.

The latter notified the Governor January 22 that "if such a letter is correctly attributed to you I must observe that both in tone and expression it is highly improper and especially unbecoming to His Majesty's representative in addressing an officer of a friendly power engaged on an errand of mercy. I must further request you to withdraw forthwith and unreservedly, such letter, and to express your regret for having written it. Your withdrawal should be telegraphed to me at once, when it will be transmitted to the Government of the United States through the proper channels."

On January 24 the Governor cabled to the Colonial Secretary, asking that the following be transmitted to Rear Admiral Davis:

"At the instance of the Secretary of State for the Colonies I desire to fully and unreservedly withdraw my letter of January 18, and to express my regret that I wrote it."

On the same date the Governor cabled to Lord Elgin as follows:

"I respectfully apply for permission to retire on account of age forthwith, and be relieved."

FEAR LYNN MAN WAS MURDERED

Special to the Boston American.

SWAMPSCOTT, April 20.—With his head battered in and the pockets of his clothing apparently rifled of their contents, the body of Marck C. Richards, who was reported missing last Saturday from his home, No. 534 Summer street, Lynn, was found yesterday in the waters off Galloupe's Point. Medical-Examiner Pinkham, who viewed the body, at first gave the opinion that Richards had committed suicide, but the police are to-day investigating a story that the man, when last seen, carried a considerable sum of money and a valuable gold watch, which are missing. Foul play is suspected.

Richards was about forty-five years old. He leaves a wife and seven children at Little Cape, N. S.

'QUAKE STORM' TOSSES LINER

NEW YORK, April 20.—Passing through a strange storm, which the ship's officers say has been raerly exceeded in violence on the Atlantic, and which is believed to have been a result of the Mexican earthquake, the steamer La Provence, which arrived last night, had a terrible experience from midnight Tuesday until Wednesday morning.

At dinner time Tuesday the barometer began to fall rapidly, and as midnight approached the ship reached an area where the air was so heavily charged with electricity that the compass became useless.

Suddenly a terrific storm swept down on the ship. Great waves broke over the liner's decks, but no rain fell, the night being perfectly clear.

The storm abated as suddenly as it came.

LOST GIRL-WIFE'S LOVE; SUES PARENTS FOR $50,000

Bennington, Vt., Banker Defendant in Suit Brought by Youth Who Eloped with Daughter.

Special to the Boston American.

BENNINGTON, Vt., April 20.—Accusing his wife's father and mother of alienating their daughter's affections and restraining her from living with her lawful husband, Forest L. Jepson, a minor, of Schenectady, N. Y., through his father, George H. Jepson, has brought a suit for $50,000 damages against Mr. and Mrs. Fred O. Graves of this city, and attached their property for the amount claimed. The suit has created a sensation here.

Mr. Graves is a retired banker and one of the best known citizens of Bennington. He has been for years in control of practically all of the banking interests in this city.

Forest Jepson became acquainted with the youngest daughter of the Graves family several years ago, and in July, 1905, the couple decided to marry. Unable to gain her father's consent, Miss Graves eloped with her sweetheart and they were married in New York, just over the State line. A child was born, and soon afterward the girl suddenly left her husband and went home to live.

TRAINS CRASH; 20 HURT BY SIGNAL MIXUP

Engineer of Fall River Local Mistakes Lights of Freight for Clear Track Sign.

MANSFIELD, April 20.—By a rear-end collision last night, twenty persons were injured, many of them seriously, when a train from Fall River bound for Boston ploughed into a freight standing at the Mansfield station, shortly before 11 o'clock. The engine of the passenger train telescoped a passenger coach used as a caboose for the freight, lifting it clear of the track and throwing it on top of a flat car.

Fire started in the wreck and there was danger of the flames reaching an oil car a short distance from the wreck.

Engineer James Martin thought the signals on the freight were a semaphore, so went ahead.

Why the freight train was standing in front of the station at the time when the train from Fall River was due will be investigated.

Fireman Frederick Rolf of Fall River was thrown against the boiler of the engine, his face striking one of the bars. His teeth were knocked out and a fracture of the jaw is feared.

The most seriously injured are:

M. B. Grant, brakeman on passenger train, cut about face and hands.

August Geissler, No. 33 Sheridan street, Jamaica Plain, bruised about legs and arms.

E. R. Forbes, Lawrence Hall, Brattle street, Cambridge, student at the Episcopal Theological School; gashes on back of head.

Miss Julia Walsh, Mansfield; badly bruised.

B. A. Portunato, No. 14 Quincy street, Dorchester, badly bruised.

Mrs. Mary Flannery, 309 Bowdoin street, Dorchester; left leg wrenched, cut about hands and thigh.

Mary Rose Carney, six years old, thrown through the window.

Mrs. Catherine Mulhern, sister-in-law of Mr. Carney.

Fred Rolfe, fireman on passenger train, Fall River; upper teeth forced through his lip; badly cut about head and hands.

W. J. Scholes, Mansfield.

A. T. Robinson, No. 3 Norton avenue, Medford.

WILL LET GIRL TEACHER WED

GREAT BARRINGTON, April 20.—Miss Mary Boyd, a teacher in the high school, has at last been informed by Superintendent of Schools Dressel that she will be released from her contract the last week in May in order that she may be married to Oscar T. Litchenstein, a New York millionaire.

When Miss Boyd first mentioned the matter to the superintendent she was refused a permit to leave her duties, and plans were made to postpone the wedding, which had been set for early June.

YOUNG WIDOW HEIRESS TO BIG PARIS FORTUNE

One of Eight Who Expect to Share in 45,000,000 Francs Left by Great Grandfather.

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., April 20.—Mrs. Olivine Dufresne of 47 Concord street, this city, is believed to be one of eight heirs to an immense fortune soon to be distributed in Paris.

Mrs. Dufresne is a young widow, who resides in the modest home left her by her husband, when he died a few years ago, and has but recently learned in detail of her good fortune, although she has had some vague knowledge of it for some years. Her father, Charles Oredus Grandmont, of St. Thomas-Pierreville, Province of Quebec, has recently visited her, bringing with him the good news that he had succeeded finally in establishing the family connection with that of a very wealthy old Parisian who died many years ago, and who was Mrs. Dufresne's great-grandfather.

The estate was large when he died, and as there were no heirs known at the time, the property went to the state. It included a large amount of real estate upon the Rue Grandmont, which was named for Mrs. Dufresne's great-grandfather, and which has gradually increased in value, until now it is estimated to be worth many millions of dollars.

Mr. Grandmont leaves soon for Paris, when he expects to be able to establish himself as the heir to the fortune, and thus gain for himself and his seven children a place among the wealthiest of the wealthy.

The property is now valued at 45,000,000 francs.

TAMPER WITH PURE FOOD BILL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 20.—Putting the profit of milk dealers and the ends of politicians above the health and lives of infants and children of Chicago and the State, someone, it was discovered last night, has so tampered with the substitute pure food bill as carefully to eliminate from it every provision against the preparation or sale of impure and unclean milk and cream.

No more dangerous piece of executive trickery has been uncovered in Springfield for a long time, and the discovery was made just in time, for the bill is on its third reading in the house.

Marry for Love, and Not for Riches or Mere Empty Honors

By Beatrice Fairfax

THE other night at the opera I sat next to a very pretty girl. She was young and sweet looking and exquisitely gowned.

The music was beautiful enough to have held the attention of any one, but the girl beside me did not listen to a note of it. Her interest was entirely centred in a dissipated-looking Italian prince who sat across the house.

Her opera glass was turned in his direction most of the time, and between the acts she could talk of nothing else.

He was neither good looking nor interesting looking, but he was a prince, and therein lay his charm.

I have not the slightest doubt that if his princeship should come wooing this young woman, who, judging from her gown and jewels, is well to do, she would give herself willingly.

Lack of Reason

ISN'T it remarkable that a girl would throw herself away on a titled nonentity when she might marry a splendid, manly young fellow of her own country?

The international marriage has not proved as successful in many cases as the foolish match-making mothers and their silly daughters have hoped for.

The mere fact that a man is a fortune hunter should be enough to bar the doors of honest American homes to him.

Instead of asking "Is he titled?" or "Is he rich?" when thinking of a man as a possible husband, a girl should ask, "Is he kind and good?"

If a man is not kind, all the titles and riches in the world cannot make his wife a happy woman.

It is far better to marry an earnest, hard-working young man who is striving to make a place for himself in the world, than to marry a blase idler who will never amount to a row of pins.

Mere Folly

IT is folly for working girls to fill their heads with ideas of marrying their employers or their employers' sons. By thinking such nonsense they often throw away good chances of marrying fine young men who would make them good husbands.

Don't overlook the qualities of the every-day man. He may not quite meet your ideas of romance, nor be as high in the social scale as you would like, but he is the man who makes the best husband for the average woman.

He is kind, industrious, honorable, and he is a good provider.

Don't expect him to be rolling in wealth. Marry him poor, and help him along the road to success.

Don't envy the society belle who marries a prince, or a duke. True, she gets a title, and she also gets a poor stick of a husband.

Marry a man whom you can love and honor; a man that you will be proud of. The girl who marries for title or riches alone can never feel the same thrill of pride as the girl who marries a man she loves and looks up to.

"DO you, did you, believe that I had any hand in this?" she gasped at last.

"Not for the hundredth part of a second," and in the fervor of Frank's reply he must have pressed her close, for a rosy glow came to her cheek in an instant, as she murmured: "I am so glad—so glad." And then, gently disengaging herself, she sank back into her chair again.

"And then," said she, "what happened? You were arrested, perhaps?"

"That," Frank answered, "was inevitable."

"And you were taken to jail?"

"Only for two days. I have been free ever since."

"And this is your reward. How is it possible that you can ever forgive me? It is too horrible! Too horrible! Who could have done this fiendish thing? It is the blackest of mysteries. The idea simply dazes me. I cannot grasp it at all. What do you think? What do you know?"

"Well," Frank said, "I have thought a lot. I know something—I can guess a good deal more—and with your aid I am sure that the mystery can be very swiftly unravelled. I had better begin at the beginning and tell you all about it."

"Do, do!" said she, now all aglow with eagerness.

Whereupon, carefully abstaining from hinting that public mention of her name had been made in connection with the affair, also from any allusion for the present to her husband, Frank gave her a rapid outline with very few reservations. She exclaimed:

"That Suzanne!"

Mysterious Suzanne

"Undoubtedly," he replied. "How long was she in your service?"

"Only for about two months. I never had any suspicion as to her honesty, but she was very vain and fond of finery, and I was not at all sorry when she declined to accompany me West."

"She had very excellent reasons for doing that," he said grimly.

"Yes. Suppose I had not received that telegram at Buffalo what a position I should have been placed in when the trunk was opened. She and her confederate had planned the thing with fiendish ingenuity. It would have been I whom they would then have arrested."

"Thank goodness," said Frank, "that it was my great privilege to spare you that humiliation."

And as he looked up, their eyes met in a way they had never met before. Then her long lashes drooped as she lowered her voice and said:

"I shall not forget."

Somehow, those few half whispered words sent a thrill through him that recompensed a thousandfold for all the miseries of the past ten days.

She was the first to speak again. "It is a horrible, a revolting idea; but I suppose the poor young man was lured away to my rooms and there robbed and murdered."

"It is impossible to say that he was murdered there," he replied, "but that is my impression all the same—that he was lured there. I have overwhelming proof. You would know Suzanne's writing, of course?"

"Certainly."

Frank placed Suzanne's letter to Reginald before her.

A Woman's Rage

She read it with a smothered scream of rage.

"Oh, the inhuman wretch," exclaimed Mme. Slavinsky.

The outraged femininity of the woman overcame her gentler nature for the moment as she pictured the role in which Suzanne had acted. Then a sudden thought struck her.

"A diamond necklace! what diamond necklace?" she queried, her glorious eyes looking fearfully into Frank's.

"Yes," said Frank, answering the question of the eyes, "the diamond necklace of the Bracebridges. I had intrusted it to Reginald, together with the diamonds you gave me and another, of which I will tell you a little later, when I knew my life to be in danger from the machinations of Mueller.

"But let me assure you now, before we go any further with this story, that although Suzanne may have your jewel case and the other contents of your trunk, she has neither the necklace nor the missing diamonds."

"How do you know that?"

"Because it is at present in the possession of local jewellers."

"Poor lad! He must have shown it to Suzanne, and for that he was murdered. What a sad business it is. But why is it now in the possession of the jewellers?"

"Because Suzanne is in New York, and this morning went to see these same jewellers and offered it for sale. They retained it, asking her to call at noon to-morrow. I was advised of the fact and had an interview with them this afternoon. The result of that interview is that I shall be there when she calls to-morrow."

BLACK TAFFETA IS HEIGHT OF FASHION

Smart for Summer Wear

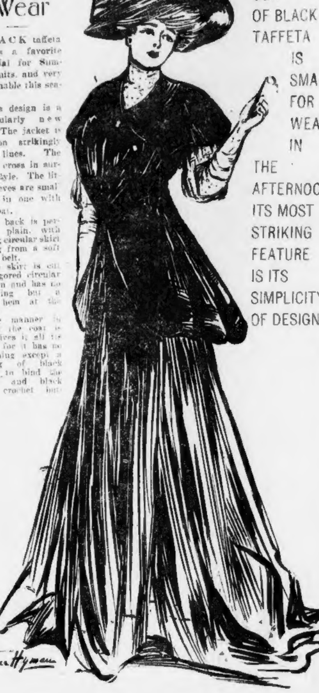
BLACK taffeta is a favorite material for Summer suits, and very fashionable this season.

This design is a particularly new one. The jacket is cut on strikingly new lines. The fronts cross in surplice style. The little sleeves are small capes in one with the coat.

The back is perfectly plain, with flaring circular skirt falling from a soft crush belt.

The skirt is cut in a gored circular pattern and has no trimming but a deep hem at the front.

The manner in which the coat is cut gives it all its style, for it has no trimming except a piping of black satin to bind the edges and black silk crochet buttons.



THIS PRETTY SUIT OF BLACK TAFFETA IS SMART FOR WEAR IN THE AFTERNOON. ITS MOST STRIKING FEATURE IS ITS SIMPLICITY OF DESIGN.

Cook Book Free For Choice Recipes

THE writer of every recipe printed below receives a copy of the BOSTON AMERICAN Economy Cook Book, a substantial indexed blankbook of 120 pages, bound in heavy oilcloth, especially designed to preserve these recipe gems in permanent form.

Write out your favorite household and cooking secrets, and win one of these books. They are well worth having. Address Economy Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street.

SALMON AND RICE

HAVE ready two cups rice boiled soft. Add to this one-half can salmon, after removing all bones and skin. Prepare milk sauce by melting together one tablespoon each of butter and flour, and adding hot milk until as thick as rich cream. Mix all ingredients together with pepper and salt to taste. Lastly add one egg and beat all together. Bake until slightly browned.

EGGS AND CHEESE

This is a nice dish for lunch or breakfast. Fry lightly one egg for each person. Place on plate and cover well with thinly sliced mild cheese. Sprinkle on pepper and salt, and place in hot oven until cheese is melted. Serve at once.

MRS. J. BUTLER.
No. 195 Main street, Winthrop.

RICE CAKES

ONE and one-half cups sugar, two cups boiled rice, one and one-half cups of milk, three eggs, salt, two tablespoons (heaping) of baking powder, flour enough to stir easily.

CREAMED FISH

Remove the bone from the codfish, flake and measure it and to every cup of fish add one-half teaspoon of salt, little pepper and nutmeg. For one pint of fish, make one pint of white sauce.

BAKED RICE PUDDING

One-half cup rice, small teaspoon salt, one quart of milk, one-half cup of sugar, bake two hours.

MRS. HOBART TAYLOR.
No. 67 Maple street, Milton, Mass.

POTTED MACKEREL

OPEN fish on underside. Remove head, tail, fins and entrails. Pack in earthen dish, strewing over each layer black pepper, ground cloves and salt, using a teaspoonful of spice, and one of salt to three fish. Cover with strong vinegar and bake slowly four hours. Serve cold, with garnish of lettuce and sliced lemons.

LIGHT CAKE

One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one cup milk, one teaspoon cream tartar, one-half teaspoon soda, little salt, whites of three eggs (beaten stiff), two cups flour, teaspoonful lemon extract.

MISS J. S. LEWIS
No. 257 State street, Portland, Me.

LIGHT CAKE

ONE large tablespoon butter creamed, add one cup of sugar gradually; into this beat two whole eggs thoroughly; one-half cup sweet milk, two cups flour to which add one-half teaspoonful soda, one teaspoon cream tartar; sift with flour.

FROSTING

Heat two tablespoons of sweet milk to which has been added one tablespoon of butter. Pour over one and one-half cups of pulverized sugar; add one tablespoon of grated chocolate or cocoa, and beat till creamy.

MRS. C. H. PICKERING.

Is Conceit the Worst of All the Aggravations of Married Life?

Dorothy Dix Says the Man with the Big "I" Habit Is the Most Troublesome Creature on the Earth

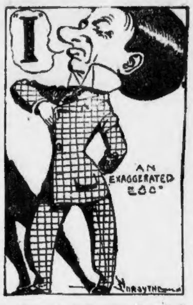
BY DOROTHY DIX

THE MAN WITH THE BIG I

WHAT is the most aggravating thing in married life?

Is it conceit?

Numerous sisters, married to men who assume a cock-of-the-walk strut on their own hearthstones will aver that nothing so completely rubs the gilt off the gingerbread of matrimony as for a husband to possess what the alienists call "an exaggerated ego."



"Commend me," says the woman who is the wife of one of these know-it-alls and am-alls, "commend me as a cheerful, comfortable every-day companion to the man who has knocked a few holes through the Ten Commandments and isn't stuck up over doing it rather than to the man who is a model of perfection and never lets you forget it.

"One may occasionally hurt your heart, but the other batters your vanity to a pulp every hour of the twenty-four. And I don't know of anything that can be as sore and aching as one's self-love.

"Now, I am one of the women who made what is called a good match. When I married, my friends all opined that I had done well, but none of them thought I had done as well for myself as the man I married did, and he has expected me to be on my knees burning incense to my luck in getting him ever since.

Gets Tiresome

"I'm willing to be reasonably thankful for not having a husband who drinks, or gambles, or runs after chorus girls, but there are times when nothing but being a perfect lady enables me to refrain from remarking that maybe the men who do those Awful Things are not quite as tiresome as the man who does nothing but discourse about himself.

"For, oh, I do get so tired of the eternal I—I—I—uttered by a man who makes mistakes in grammar, errors in his quotations, boggles his historical references, and who has never been able to do anything more profitable and spectacular in life than hold down a fairly good job as a clerk.

"Yet there isn't a question under the sun that he doesn't settle offhand, and the only reason that there is ever a panic on Wall street or muddle in the Government is because Mr. Morgan and Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Roosevelt neglect to ask his advice.

"And the way he brags sets my teeth on edge. He foresaw the rise in U. P. and could have made millions, only he doesn't believe in speculating. He could have been Governor of the State long ago.

"In fact, a certain prominent official, very close to the President, but whose name he won't mention, told him years ago that it was his sacred duty for a man with a statesmanlike mind such as his, to devote it to the service of his country, but politics doesn't attract him, and so he has resisted every effort to get him to be Minister to St. James's.

Nothing Like It!

"Never were such fish caught as the whales he hooks, but doesn't land, when he goes off for his Summer outing, and after the race he always remarks casually that he knew such and such a horse was going to win the Suburban or the Futurity, and could have told you so all along.

"Our children exist in a sort of a reflected halo because they are his. When they take prizes at school, or people praise them for their beauty, he throws out his chest and tells how he has raised them, and how they are supposed to look just like him. Yet I'm the one that wrestles with their manners and their morals, and sees that they get their lessons.

"But that isn't the worst. I could stand for his blowing his own horn if it didn't involve his making invidious comparison between the wise, perfect way in which he does things and the poor bungling way in which I do things. If dinner is five minutes late, I'm reminded that he is as punctual as the clock, and owes his marvellous success in life to always being on time.

"If I have trouble with the servants, I have to listen to a recitation on his wonderful ability to handle people as exemplified by the fact that he has had the same stenographer for three years.

Is Infallible

"If I get sick I am told that it is because I lack firmness of character and strength of mind such as he possesses, and that enables him to combat every weakness of the flesh.

"'You never see me give up for trifling aches and pains, such as a mere headache that sends you to bed.'

"'Oh, I don't know,' I respond, 'seems to me that you were sending for a doctor, and a trained nurse, and a lawyer to make your will about a week ago after you had been kept at the office until 3 a. m., balancing your books.'

"'So I did,' he answers, 'but that was a different matter entirely. I was threatened with congestion of the brain, and only staved it off by the intelligent and heroic measures that I took.'

"As for my cooking, how unfavorably it contrasts with the marvels that he has achieved when he was camping out. As for my attempts to economize, how ridiculous they seem, how pitiful, and paltry, and foolish, when I hear him discourse about how he could keep house, and clothe the family, and pay rent and doctors' bills on absolutely nothing, if he only had time to devote his great financial ability to the subject.

"So far as I can ascertain, the only error in judgment he has ever made in his entire life was when he picked me out for a wife, and, oh, how fervently I wish he hadn't made that one.

"The man with the big I habit is the most tiresome creature on earth, and as being bored to death is the most painful death imaginable, I contend that conceit is the most aggravating thing in married life."

What say you, gentlemen?

To Make Flannel Blouses Like New

"FLANNEL blouses never look really nice after they've once been washed," a woman was heard to remark.

"Oh, you're quite mistaken," was the quick reply from a friend. "I'll tell you how I manage:

"Keep a stock of soap jelly, made by shredding half a pound of any good yellow soap into one quart of boiling water, and simmering till dissolved. When cold, it's a jelly.

"Allow a heaped tablespoonful of this to half a gallon of warm water in which you can comfortably bear your hand; see that the jelly is quite dissolved, and in goes the blouse.

"I squeeze and souse it up and down in this, and then in another similar lot of suds, after which it is generally clean—unless it is the first time of washing, when, if there happens to have been a lot of dressing used in the making of the material, it sometimes needs a third lot of suds before the dirt will come out.

"Then rinse it well in clear warm water and either squeeze as dry as possible, or—what is far better—put it through the wringer.

"If wrung in the ordinary twisty way between the hands, the flannel would probably shrink in drying.

"Then hang it in a shady, windy place to dry; if you live in a tiny flat, hang it on a clothes-horse, put it in front of the window, leaving both door and window wide open.

"When very nearly dry press very thoroughly on the wrong side with a fairly warm iron, being very careful to go well up into the gathers at top and bottom of sleeves.

"To iron when very nearly dry is better than to do it when half dry."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEPENDS ON THE COUSIN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Last year I was introduced to a young man whom I have grown to love dearly. I am perfectly aware that my love is returned.

I have a cousin who thinks a good deal of me, and who continually comes to the house and asks me to accompany him to the theatre.

Now, dear Miss Fairfax, I am very much in want of your kind advice, as to whether you think it right of me to go out with this cousin, and whether you think it would make the first young man angry if he were to know of my going out with my cousin.

I would dread to do anything to hurt his feelings, so would appreciate your kind advice very much.

H.

IT depends a good deal on the kind of man your cousin is. If he is at all interested in you in more than a cousinly way it is quite likely that the other man will resent your going out with him. If, however, you and your cousin are merely on cousinly terms I see no reason why you should not go out with him.

TELL THE GIRL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a girl for the past six months, during which time I have taken her to several places of amusement, and I must confess that on each occasion I enjoyed myself to the utmost. She is a girl of refinement, rather good looking, and displays a taste in dress that would do honor to a queen. When I am in her company I not only thoroughly enjoy myself, but I experience a sort of pride which I never felt in the presence of any other girl. I never told her of my love for her, nor did any of my actions while in her presence tend to convey that idea to her, but I know that she feels that we are more than ordinary friends to each other.

Now, this young lady has a sister whom I admire even more than I do her, and I have reason to believe that she also thinks a lot of me. I would like to transfer my affections from the one to the other, but I do not like to do so for fear of offending the one I am now going with. And then again, I am afraid if I made advances to this young lady she would stop me, not because she does not care for me, but because she does not want to "cut her sister out."

I do not know how to act in this matter, and if you will give me your opinion on the proper course to pursue you will greatly oblige. J. A. K.

YOU are indeed in a very difficult position. It seems to me that there is only one thing to do, and that is tell the girl. It will not be a very easy or pleasant thing to do, but it would be just as unfair to her to marry her while loving her sister. That would be an impossible situation, sure to bring about much unhappiness. If you have never told her that you loved her it is quite possible that you over-estimate the state of her feelings toward you. She may feel it a good deal at first, but I am sure she will get over it in time. She seems a very nice girl, and it is too bad that you cannot care for her. Be very sure you know your own mind before you take any decisive step.

RATHER LATE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a young man for over a year, and we were very fond of each other until one day we had some misunderstanding which I took very seriously and refused to go with him. Shortly after this he left town, and I have since received three letters from him, explaining matters and making apologies, but I did not answer them, as I felt very much hurt. However, several months have passed since I received his last letter, and now his offence does not seem to me as serious as it did then, and I would very much like him to come back. I would ask your advice, whether it would be proper for me to write him now?

CONSTANT READER.

IT is rather late in the day to try and make up, but you might try. If his love for you still lives he will, no doubt, be glad of a reconciliation. He may feel, however, that he did more than his share toward making up, and not be willing to receive your advances. Write him a nice note, saying that you are sorry that you were so unforgiving, and that you would like to be friends once more.

ONE WAY TO CURE BAD HABITS

Here Is How One Clever Girl Did It

No Girl Can Well Afford to Be a Lounger

AT first, when a girl leaves school, she feels rather like a boat without a rudder. She misses being "kept up to the mark" by the regular hours and routine of school.

It is a temptation to lie late in bed of a morning, because she doesn't have to get up. She falls into the habit of dressing slowly, dawdles over breakfast, and muddles through the morning without a definite plan of work and action.

And so the smart schoolgirl, who did excellently when she was kept up to the mark by the discipline of the school time-table, develops into a tiresome "lounger."

The "Lounger"

Don't we all know the girl "lounger"? She is always five minutes behindhand. comes in from a walk, and doesn't take off her hat and tidy up till luncheon is on the table.

When she is asked to post a letter, she puts it in her pocket, and forgets all about it till next day.

If mother sends her to pay a bill, she doesn't bring the receipt or the change till asked for it.

The buttons of her gloves always come off when there is barely time to catch a train.

The "lounger" makes many good resolutions. She is determined not to yield to-morrow morning to the temptation to finish that thrilling new story. Work first and play afterward. She will arrange all the flowers, turn out and tidy the wardrobe and cupboards in her bedroom. After a busy, useful morning she will sit down and enjoy that splendid novel.

Lacks Will Power

But, alas! when to-morrow comes, she thinks there can't be any harm in just taking a peep at the next page to see whether Belinda's lover really played her false.

Two hours later mother finds her in an easy chair still absorbed in the story, and with none of her morning's home duties performed. The "slack" spirit has entered in and taken possession and she hasn't the strength of mind and will to eject him sturdily and once for all.

One schoolgirl determined that she would not become a "lounger" when she exchanged school for home life.

The first rule she made was to fine herself every time she got up later than she ought to. One penny was put religiously into a little charity box each time she found herself guilty of slackness, or falling below the mark of a smart, practical business girl.

She has much more fun than her lazy sisters. Her brothers take her on all sorts of pleasant excursions, because they find she is always ready to the minute, alert, cheerful and eager for sport.

Some Good Reasons Why

Everybody Will Want the

Boston Sunday American

What the "400" are wearing is told, with illustrations, by Mrs. Cholly Knickerbocker. The article is full of useful descriptions and hints that will make everyone appreciate it.

The Sunday American publishes the best and most beautiful photographs of the women and girls in Boston and New England society. To-morrow there will be photographs not reproduced in any newspaper before.

What is going on in society—the news of departures for Summer homes and plans for the resorts—all this is presented to the readers of the Sunday American.

Alice Roosevelt Longworth and Mrs. Perry Belmont have become godmothers to new modes and colors in outdoor dress. They're described in detail in a specially prepared article and with detailed description.

And the babies, the beautiful babies, they are winning prizes every week. If yours is not entered in this contest, it isn't too late. See how fine the photographs look in THE SUNDAY AMERICAN and read the stories about these splendid little tots and their mothers.

Half-a-million-dollar layette for Spain's little baby—all of the rarest and priceless old lace, chiffon and exquisite ribbons—the convent-made garments for the royal infant. A page illustrated article. It's more than interesting.

Two serial stories of romance, love, tragedy—full of absorbing interest—will entertain the entire family whether the sun shines or the rain falls.

The children—young and old—know the funniest comic supplement in the newspaper world by sight. To-morrow Fritz and Hans get into a spanking peck of trouble; Happy Hooligan has a terribly funny (?) time; Maud, the mule, cuts up some splitting capers; Ragtag and Bobtail, the new, merry mischief makers, who are always getting other people into trouble, have a high old time, and Buster—what doesn't he do! Wait and see the Sunday American, children—and papa and mamma.

SONGSTRESS ON WEDDING TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

Heroine of Secret Marriage on Honeymoon with Cowboy Who Won Her Heart.

SOON WILL RESUME TOUR

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 20.—Attorney Vere Goldthwaite of Boston, and his ac- omplished and famous bride, who until arch 21 was Miss Ellen Beach Yaw, the inger of world-wide celebrity, are here spend the balance of their honeymoon rs. Goldthwaite, though born in a little wn near Buffalo, N. Y., claims Califor a as her home, for her parents brought there when she was but a mite of a .

he wedding, which took place at the tel Somerset in Boston, on March 21, which was successfully concealed from many friends of the charming and tinguished bride and the successful g lawyer, came as the crowning touch most delightful and unusual romance h had its beginning years and years when Mr. Goldthwaite, a cowboy on ert plain in Southern Idaho, met Miss who had then achieved no fame as ger, but had her career ahead of her.

Rode to Her Car Window.

Each was attracted, even then, by the other. A train in which Miss Yaw, then a girl, was a passenger, was halted at a station in Southern Idaho. A band of cowboys rode up and the youngest among them was Vere Goldthwaite. He rode his horse right up to the car window where the girl sat and a short conversation, in which addresses were mutually given, resulted.

A correspondence began between the pair. Miss Yaw studied music and began to attract attention. The young man gave up the life on the plains and went East. He learned from her letters that the girl had gone to Europe and he signed to ride as a rough rider with "Buffalo Bill." So he went to Europe with the Wild West show, that he might be near the girl he loved.

As a grocery clerk in Boston, at the age of twenty-two, he began the study of law and he was graduated from the Boston University and became a lawyer in 1897. Three years ago, he felt that he must win the pretty and now famous girl. He dropped his practice and went to Europe and in Italy he found her.

Followed Her to Rome.

From Naples to Rome he followed her and finally, seated on a huge block of marble in the ancient Coliseum, he proposed and was accepted. A year ago Miss Yaw, a finished singer with countless engagements, returned to America and the young attorney was a passenger on the same boat.

Mrs. Goldthwaite expects to fill all of her Western engagements. Her husband will accompany her. A trip to Europe during the mid-Summer weeks may be taken and this Fall, Attorney Goldthwaite and his wife expect to go to Boston or to New York, where he will begin the active practice of law.

LAY SUICIDE TO EDDY SUIT

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., April 20.—Rev. Irving C. Tomlinson, whose sister, Miss Mary E. Tomlinson, threw herself from a window in the Parker House, Boston, Friday morning, has received countless messages of condolence, not only from Christian Scientists, but from others. The community has been shocked by news of the suicide.

Edson J. Hill of this city went to Boston on the same train with Miss Tomlinson Thursday morning. He noticed that she left the train at Manchester, Nashua and Lowell, and that her conduct was unusual.

Miss Tomlinson's mind showed no symptoms of breaking down until Wednesday.

By friends of the family the unbalancing of Miss Tomlinson's mind is ascribed to the Eddy litigation.

ALL AROUND THE EARTH BY RAIL.

Ready to begin work on the two great connecting links which will make a continuous railroad up through South America, through Mexico, across the United States, through Alaska, down under Behring Straits, over the wilds of Siberia into Europe, by tunnel under the English Channel, and then across Southern Europe, Arabia and Africa to Capetown. QUINCY ELKS HOLD PUBLIC FLAG-RAISING

A public flag-raising was held in Quincy on the lawn in front of the Elks' clubhouse on Foster street, and was attended by hundreds, including national, State and city officials. Just before the flag was unfurled Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy offered prayer from the balcony. The flag was unfurled by Daniel J. Deasy, exalted ruler of Quincy Lodge, while a band played "The Star Spangled Banner," and the immense crowd sang the national anthem. Addresses were made by Representative Eugene C. Hultman and Congressman John A. Sullivan of Boston.

SETTLE ROUTE FOR N. H. STATE HIGHWAY

CONCORD, N. H., April 20.—The Governor and Council yesterday decided upon the route for the Merimack Valley trunk highway. It will follow the river on the west side from Nashua to Manchester and betwen Hooksett and Concord will follow the east side. It is estimated that about $60,000 will be available from both towns and State during the coming year.

STOCKS IRREGULAR; SOME SMALL GAINS

NEW YORK, April 20.—The stock market opened dull and irregular, but with most of the changes gains.

Initial prices showed increases of ⅜ in Atchison; ½ in B. R. T., ⅜ in National Lead; ¼ in Smelting and ⅛ in Southern Pacific. The steel shares, Amalgamated and Reading opened lower.

SANFORD'S GINGER NOG.

HINTS FOUL PLAY IN REV. DR. BURR'S DEATH

REV. DR. M'AFEE, BROOKLYN, TELLS OF PASTOR'S FEAR OF ENEMIES.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Renewed activity in the investigation of the mystery connected with the death of Rev. Everett D. Burr on February 25 was prompted yesterday by the significant announcement of Rev. Dr. Clelland McAfee, pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, that Dr. Burr had pronounced premonitions that he was going to be killed, and that he had feared his enemies in the Congo relief work would hasten his end.

Dr. Burr fell or was jostled from a train on the Boston & Albany Railroad near Westboro, Mass., and when his body was found it was discovered that he had been robbed of his gold watch and chain and $100 in money. Dr. Burr had been actively engaged in exposing Congo evils since he resigned from the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of Newton Centre.

The New England authorities, believing it was an accidental death, did not probe the affair as thoroughly as they probably will now, since the important statement of Dr. McAfee.

Here is what Dr. Burr told Dr. McAfee on the night of December 20, when the Men's Club of the Lafayette avenue Church adopted such strong resolutions calling upon President Roosevelt to interfere in the Congo atrocities:

"Dr. McAfee, this Congo work that I am doing is no easy matter. I have had several intimations that my life is not safe.

"These Congo exposures have incurred the enmity of the King of Belgium, as well as that of many powerful people in New York city. I have not only had premonitions that I would be killed, but the uncertainty of my life has also been hinted to me by other persons who knew of my work."

SAY HE TOOK $5,000 GRIP

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, April 20.—Charged with stealing a grip containing more than $5,000 worth of negotiable paper from George T. Fitchburg, president of the Fairfield Lawn Swing Company of Brunswick, Me., a man who refused to give his name, but who from papers found in his possession is believed to be George E. Hartley of Fitchburg, is locked up. The alleged theft occurred in the union passenger station.

Hiding in a flag shanty on Waverley street, the police discovered the man with the missing grip.

TRAIN KILLS SECTION HAND

Section Hand Michael Downey was struck and instantly killed by a train while he was working to-day on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad tracks at Stony Brook, between Forest Hills and Mt. Hope stations. He was thirty-five years old and lived at No. 3,846 Washington street, Roxbury.

$30,000 PULP MILL GONE.

MIDDLEBURY, Vt., April 20.—Fire yesterday destroyed one of the Green Mountain Company's pulp mills, throwing twenty men out of employment. Loss $30,000.

WOMAN TELLS HOW SHE PUT ROBBER TO FLIGHT

Facing Pistol Somerville Milliner Reaches Telephone When Ordered to Hand Over Savings.

While the Somerville police this morning were seeking frantically to run down the well-dressed, gentlemanly but very bold hold-up man who robbed Mrs. Mary A. Pelo at the point of a gun in her millinery establishment at No. 23 Bow street, Somerville, almost next door to police headquarters, the doughty dressmaker herself found time to tell the BOSTON AMERICAN how she succeeded in bluffing off the intruder with only $25, and how under pretence of hunting for more money she managed to reach a telephone and summon help. This is her story:

"He was a most gentlemanly burglar. When he was asking for my money he was most polite and only spoke above a whisper. It was about 5:30 last night when the door opened and a very well-dressed individual entered.

"Then he locked the door behind him and laid a revolver down on the counter and demanded my money.

"'I want it all,' he said most courteously.

"'But I haven't got any,' I said.

"'Oh, yes, you have—if you will pardon a contradiction,' said he.

"With that I went around to the cash drawer, but was so frightened I could not at first open it. After fumbling around, I finally got it open and gave him $25.

"'Thank you,' said he. 'Is there any more?'

"I was about to say no when he spied some loose change. He calmly scooped it out of the drawer. Then he told me to get the rest of the money that was in my living apartments, but instead of looking for the money I went to the telephone and notified the police. He heard the bell ring and bidding me 'Good night,' opened the door and ran out before I could do a thing to detain him. He was about thirty years old and five feet nine inches in height. He wore a dark hat and a paddock overcoat. I never saw him before."

LOEB MUZZLES REPORTERS AT WHITE HOUSE

Scribes Mustn't Write Up Antics of Family Pets or Call at White House at Night.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Secretary Loeb, acting instructions from the President, has requested newspaper correspondents to abstain from chronicling the private affairs of the Roosevelt family. In pursuance of this wish on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt he has also asked the newspaper men to cease their visits to the "big house" at night.

When the office building was constructed in the west end of the White House lot about three years ago, all the executive business was handled outside the White House proper. But even this arrangement did not give President and Mrs. Roosevelt the privacy they believed they should have in their little social gatherings, the diversions of the children and even antics of the family pets.

Hereafter any "contumacious correspondent" who loiters about the White House will be ordered by the policeman to move on. Particular objection wi be entered to "loiterers" after dark.

FIND FARMER POISON VICTIM; HOLD SUSPECT

Special to the Boston American.

ADAMS, April 20.—That strychnine in sufficient quantity to have caused death was found in the body of Frank Ingraham, the farmer, who died at Windsor Bush, fourteen miles from here, on March 15, was made known to-day at the arraignment in the district court of Edward Launt, who was employed by Ingraham at the time of the latter's death, and who at that time was arrested in connection with it.

Dr. Robert L. Emerson of Boston testified at the hearing to-day that in the stomach of Ingraham he had found enough strychnine to have caused death. He also found strychnine, he testified, in a jug from which Ingraham is said to have drunk a few minutes before he died.

Launt, who since the death of his employer has been in jail, asked to-day through his counsel, former Senator Cassidy of Adams, that the hearing be continued till May 3. This was done.

The prosecution's theory is that Launt poisoned his employer because of a fancied grievance.

BEAT HORSE TO RACE LONGBOAT; PAYS $20 FINE

Brookline Judge Is Lenient to Young Marathon Spectator When Mother Pleads.

Because he cruelly lashed a livery horse to make the animal keep up all the way in the Marathon race with Tom Longboat, the Indian winner of the run, Fred Sheridan was fined $20 in Brookline District Court to-day for abusing the horse. Sheridan is twenty-two years old and lives at No. 24 Clifton street, Roxbury.

On account of the tearful plea of the youth's mother, who told Judge Perkins that her son was the sole support of herself and her daughter, the court placed on file a drunkenness charge against Sheridan and also made arrangements for him to pay his fine at the rate of $5 a week.

Sheridan took a friend with him. The drive out to Ashland, followed by the trot home to keep up with the fleet-footed Longboat, naturally wearied the horse, though the brute stepped along as best he could.

At Coolidge's Corner Sheridan lashed the horse savagely, raising fearful welts on its flanks. A policeman took the two youths and the rig to the station. Sheridan's companion was released, but Sheridan was booked on a charge of intoxication. A second one of cruelty to animals was added to-day.

Sheridan pleaded guilty to both charges. Then his mother pleaded that Fred was usually a good boy, was a steady worker and brought his pay home to her.

Judge Perkins told her to make Fred give her all his pay till he had the fine cleared and to allow him spending money only for carfares to his work and back and for his lunches.

"I make this arrangement for you," said the court to Sheridan, "because you are your mother's only support and I want you to bear the burden of this as much as possible."

LOST IN STOCKS, BANK HEAD QUITS

NEED LEADERS, SAYS DR. HALE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—What this nation needs is men who can be taught to be leaders, says the Rev. Edward Everett Hale. Dr. Hale was one of the speakers at the seventy-fifth anniversary banquet of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity at the Hotel Astor last night. He said in part:

"What we need in this nation to-day is men whom we can teach to be leaders. I am not afraid but that every immigrant will teach his children to read and write the English language, but with the constant inpouring of these tens of thousands of immigrants and the swelling of our nation to remarkable girth, the need of the day is men who will not turn into themselves and live for themselves, but who will work for the State. It is not the man who says, 'This is mine; these are my stocks, my railroads, my business,' for whom the country has need. Only men who are broad enough to live outside of themselves can hope to keep this country on even keel."

SUBMARINE SHIP SIGNALS

Boston shipping owners in considerable numbers are adopting the newly-invented submarine signal apparatus. Ten shipping companies in the towing business have just ordered a total of twenty-three tugs equipped with the signals. The New England Navigation Company has arranged to have the Fall River liners Priscilla and Puritan fitted with receiving apparatus and the Puritan is also to be equipped with apparatus for sending submarine signals.

From reports on signals used on ocean-going vessels the submarine signals can be heard from three to seven miles. The steamer Baltic heard a submarine bell a distance of seven miles in thick weather. The Kaiser Wilhelm II. heard one the same distance while steaming sixteen knots an hour.

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

It was hard luck for Colonel Dovey to have rain interfere so that the afternoon game of Patriots' Day could not be played. However, the Boston and New York teams had a good rest up and are ready for whatever this afternoon has in store.

Early in the morning the sun came out strong and it looked as though it would be a fine day for baseball, but before the first game began there were dark clouds and rain fell before the last man was out. The Giants won the game in the first inning owing to Gus Dorner's wildness. He passed four men and hit another. A sacrifice and a scratch single sandwiched in enabled the Giants to score three runs.

After that Dorner pitched a fine game, although his wildness cost another run in the fifth. A base on balls, another hit by pitcher and a line drive for a single by Dahlen doing the business. That hit of Dahlen's which slammed the left field fence was the only clean single made off Dorner's pitching.

Boston had chances to get in the running, but Ames was there with the goods also and the best the locals cluld do was to make one solitary run in the seventh. This came from Corcoran's fumble, a force and singles by Ritchey and Brain.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

A mutt dog broke into the grounds and ran around for three innings, scampering all over the field. No one could catch him, until finally Seymour made friends with him out in centre field. At the close of the inning the dog followed Si to the bench and then the player led him to an exit and he disappeared.

* * *

Beaumont looks as good as ever. He made one of the few hits of the morning.

* * *

Some one in the grand stand rolled a lemon out to Dorner in the third inning.

It looks as if this form of sarcasm would prevail all over the league circuit this season.

* * *

Tenney was the recipient of a big bunch of American beauty roses when he went to bat in the first inning. He responded in the usual fashion by striking out.

* * *

Ames had a great drop ball working; one of those old-fashioned ones. His curves were all to the good also.

* * *

Umpire Emslie looks familiar. He pays as little attention to the kicks of pitchers and catchers and batsmen as he ever did.

* * *

Bresnahan appeared on the coaching lines attired in a long bathrobe, and had to take the small talk of the bleachers as a penalty.

* * *

Needham will be out of the game for ten days or more as a result of the spiking he got in Philadelphia on Thursday.

* * *

The attendance was given out as 5,708, but the reporters thought John Dovey had made a mistake as the crowd looked as though it would easily number many more. They were standing three deep behind the ropes.

* * *

McGraw wasn't in uniform. He sat on the bench in citizen's clothes.

* * *

Devlin struck out twice and Ames three times fanned the air. Tenney was twice fooled and so was Dorner.

ST. JOHNS EASY WINNERS.

The South Boston Y. M. C. A. Seniors received a bad beating by the St. Johns, 18 to 11. The St. Johns obtained the lead in the first inning and were never headed. The features of the game was the battery work of the winners, Johnson at first and R. Taylor, while Kammerer, Hadfield and Blowers did best for the losers.

HOLY CROSS WON FAST GAME.

WORCESTER, April 20.—Holy Cross won from Georgetown here yesterday in a ten-inning game, played in a snowstorm. The score was 1 to 0, and, despite the inclemency of the weather, the game was the fastest ever played on Fitton Field. The pitching of Mansfield and the fielding of Cahill and Barry were the features for Holy Cross, while Cantwell's pitching and Smith's fielding were the most noteworthy for Georgetown.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 20.—George A. Huff will actively commence his duties as manager of the Boston Americans this afternoon when the Pilgrims will clash with Clarke Griffith's Highlanders.

Bill Dineen, who hasn't had a chance to show his form in a league game yet, is down on the cards to work for the visitors, while "Smiling Al" Orth will probably deliver the pellets for the home team. With two such fine slab artists doing the honors, the fans are guaranteed a good, live exhibition of the national pastime.

"Harmony and Speed," Huff's Motto.

"Harmony and speed is my motto," said Huff to-day. "I will endeavor to make the men as fast on their feet as I know how. Base-running will be a prime factor with me, and I think you will notice a big difference in this department, which I understand is one of Boston's weak points, in the next two weeks."

The new leader is already becoming a big favorite with the Boston players. Criger and Sullivan were the only players that had a former acquaintance with him, but now all the players are getting into his confidence, and like him unusually well.

Manager Huff will have his first opportunity to show what he can do against the New Yorks this afternoon. He wants to mark his introduction to office with a victory and his men will hustle in order to accomplish this end.

Clarke Griffith thinks very well of his team now, and he will endeavor to make it warm for his old rivals from Boston. Every time the Gotham and Hub teams meet there is sure to be plenty of action, and this afternoon will prove no exception to the rule.

Highlanders After Flag.

"This is the season in which we will make the biggest try in our career to win the American League flag," said Griffith today. "We've had lots of hard luck in preceding seasons, especially with our pitchers, and this has been the chief reason why we have yet to win the pennant. With a reasonable amount of luck this year, I don't see what team in the league has anything on us, and therefore I think the boys will win out. But you never can tell."

Bill Dineen was feeling fine to-day, and very anxious to get into the box and show the fans the tip-top condition he is in this season.

"Just let me get a chance at those Highlanders to-day," said Bill, " and I bet a hat I will win the game."

Notes of the Diamond

The baseball problem joker has begun his deadly work. An exchange prints the following: If 210 professional ball clubs employ 4,200 players who receive an aggregate salary of $1,500,000 for 154 games, why is Lajoie a better player than Wagner?

A Detroit paper says that the Tigers boycotted Tyrus Cobb because of his "pugnacious proclivities and pugilistic propensity." If it is as bad as that it is a wonder they didn't give him ten years in the penitentiary.

Willie Sudhoff, formerly of the St. Louis Browns, and one year one of the best twirlers in the league, is now on the Kansas City team. Sudhoff was one of the first pitchers to use the "cross-fire ball," which Billy Hogg, of the Yankees, worked so effectively toward the end of last season.

Manager Chance of the Cubs is not taking any chances of falling down this Summer through a shortage of substitutes. There are now twenty-four athletes with the nearworld's champions, and "Husk" says that all of them will be kept.

Roger Bresnahan and the armor-plate that he wears on his shins made a great hit in the South, and the diamonds of the Southern circuit will probably begin to look like a cricket field before long.

The Boston club is strong with the B's this year. Bates, Bridwell, Brain, Brush, Brown, Beaumont and Boultes are a few. Their batting order will look like some new kind of Subway ad.

Manager McAleer of the Browns offered the Pirates Outfielders Frisk and Criss, both fearful sluggers, but sloppy in the field, and Clarke wired back that he was well fixed with players.

Somebody got busy the other day with a bug on statistics in his head and figured that if a pitcher works in forty games in a season he has thrown the ball about seventy miles. Pretty good throw, eh?

Big Orvie Overall, who Chance thinks is another Rusie, and the great Miner Brown are both in midseason form now, and they will be depended on for most of the Spring work, until the rest of the Cub twirlers work around into shape.

Cincinnati critics say that the most dangerous bunt hitter in the National League is Hans Lobert, of Cincinnati.

John Baxter, the 6 feet 3 inch Butte first baseman on trial with the Cardinals, has made a good showing.

A brother of Vic Willis, of the Pirates, is pitching for the Charleston, S. C., team. He has been doing good work in the Spring games.

RUBE WADDELL TRAINS ON COCOANUT PIES

That baseball stimulates the appetite is a fact which few hotel men or boarding house keepers will deny. And those who have seen some of the big fellows line up at the table after a game have often marveled at the capacity tests. It has been claimed that ball players are surpassed in the eating line only by harvest hands. This is a bit big—probably too big. But there's something that tends to show the size of the appetites: Harry Pulliam, when he was running the old Louisville club for Dreyfuss, once attempted to put the players on "the European plan." When the bill for the first meal was handed him by the New York hotel proprietor Pulliam nearly fainted. Wagner's feed came to $14.25. "Pete" Dowling's $12, and the rest of the party averaged above $5. There was a switch. The American plan was quickly adopted.

Thornton Great Eater.

Walter Thornton, a pitcher who started with Anson several years ago, is credited with the highest table average. Thornton, so they say, could "spot" any player two lamb chops, a few potatoes and a few other "sides." One hot Summer day he was pitching in Philadelphia. After every two innings he ate a sandwich, and about the eighth inning he delayed the game by scouring for a piece of pie.

"Rube" Waddell is reported to be a past master at the table. He trains on cocoanut pie. Carey, who played for Louisville two seasons, also has a huge appetite. The story goes that Carey and the pitcher took a drive one day and were caught at nightfall miles away from their hotel. There was a negro cabin by the roadside, and they halted there to ask the colored "mammy" to get them supper. Cunningham said he ate seventy-two corn cakes, among other things, and that he was helpless when Carey was eating his ninety-fourth cake. The size of the cakes was not mentioned.

Drank Twenty-Four Quarts.

Another yarn makes "Tim" Donahue the central figure. Donahue at the time of the story was rooming with "Bazzaz" Kilroy. A Portsmouth, N. H., friend sent Kilroy twenty-four quarts of ale, which "Bazzaz" intended to take to his brother. Kilroy brought the moisture to his room and went out for a walk. Returning about midnight, he found Donahue smoking a big cigar and drinking a glass of ale. "Fine ale," remarked "Tim." Then there was a scene, but finally Kilroy calmed and decided that he would have a swig, seeing the case was broken. To his surprise, he couldn't find a full bottle. Kilroy stormed again, but Donahue simply remarked, "I had an ale thirst to-night."

LONGBOAT WAS IN BAD SHAPE ON TUESDAY

SPRINGFIELD, April 20.—Thomas Longboat, the winner of the Marathon run yesterday, was examined here last Tuesday by Dr. J. H. McCurdy for heart action and blood pressure. The examination was made after Longboat had finished a run of two and a half miles. The heart rate before the run, lying down, was 62 per minute, and after the run 90. Before the run, standing, it was 80.

The rate in this position after the run could not be taken, as the athlete was so exhausted that he could not stand erect. The blood pressure before the run, lying down, was 128, after the run 110. Before the run, standing, it was 130; after the run 90, and fast decreasing.

Longboat was tired out by his ride here from Montreal and his stomach was upset. The point to the whole matter is that Longboat must have recovered very quickly in order to have won that long run yesterday.

THE BUSH LEAGUER'S BALLAD
By William F. Kirk.

A PROMISING young shortstop wearing square-toed russet shoes
Was sitting in the clubhouse with a heavy case of blues.
All through the long Spring training trip his work had been superb,
But when he tried the big league game he fielded like an herb,
He muffed two easy pop-ups, yes, mighty easy ones,
And made a heave that cost his team a brace of juicy runs,
So when he doffed his uniform on that eventful day,
The following doleful sentences this shortstop then did say:

CHORUS:

"Take me back to dear old Oshkosh, that's the place where I belong,
Where my batting eye was steady and my throwing arm was strong,
Where I used to run them bases without traces of fatigue;
Take me back to dear old Oshkosh in the grand Wisconsin League."

UPON his square-toed russet shoes the teardrops fell like rain,
Till not a single vestige of the polish did remain.
He thought of all the eulogies in the days he played for dimes,
Penned by the sporting editor upon the Oshkosh Times,
He thought about the peaceful fans (five hundred on a Sunday
And maybe twenty-seven if they chanced to play on Monday),
And then he seemed to hear again that howling city crowd,
And bursting into tears again once more he sobbed aloud:

CHORUS:

"Take me back to dear old Oshkosh, that's the place where I belong,
Where my batting eye was steady and my throwing arm was strong,
Where I used to run them bases without traces of fatigue;
Take me back to dear old Oshkosh in the grand Wisconsin League."

GAMES TO-DAY AT NORTH END

At North End Park this afternoon the games that were scheduled yesterday but were postponed on account of the weather will take place. These games are sanctioned by the A. A. U. and are held every year, the prizes being offered by the city. A large crowd was disappointed yesterday and many young athletes were anxious to show their ability.

HUB FANS TO SEE OPENING GAME AT PROVIDENCE

Many Boston friends of Fred Doe and Hugh Duffy, the new owners of the Providence club, were the recipients this morning of a handsomely engraved invitation to the opening game of the Eastern League season at Providence next Thursday. The invitation is a very swell affair and ranks with the artistic engravings sent out by the two Boston clubs for their opening-day games.

Doe and Duffy have been working hard for many weeks preparing for the opening of the season, and if the weather is anywhere near pleasant a tremendous crowd will be out to see the sport. Doe has attended to most of the details of the opening, while Duffy has taken the team in hand and coached it for the long struggle that is to come.

A big party of Bostonians have signified their intention of going to Providence for the opening. Presidents Ban Johnson and Harry Pulliam have promised to be present, and all the high city and State officials will also be on hand.

'MAJAH' TAYLOR MADE TO LEAVE FRENCH HOTEL

PARIS, April 20.—Major Taylor, the champion negro bicycle rider, to-day was forced to leave a hotel where he had registered to attend the races at Buffalo Park, owing to the drawing of the color line.

American tourists who were stopping at the same hotel with Taylor were responsible for his being ordered out. They declared they would leave the place themselves unless the negro was ordered out. The management accordingly requested Taylor to leave.

In an interview Taylor said: "This treatment is in strange contrast with the welcome which the French have always given us before. To avoid a recurrence of any such unpleasant incidents I have decided to seek admission at any other hotel, but to take a home of my own at Neuilly."

TRAINER MILAM HAS LIKELY LOOKING COLTS

"If there is not a couple of Futurity winners in those stalls, then there is little use of barking about breeding in the purple," declared Hugh Milam, trainer at the Johnson Farm, Ponkapoag, pointing to the recently arrived yearling colts from Kentucky.

"In the first stall is the youngster by the noted Futurity sire, Moko, and out of the great brood mare Fanella, 2:13, the dam of Sadie Mac, 2:06¼, and Todd, 2:14¾. If all goes well with him he will be kept for the stud here, after filling his Futurity engagements.

"That other one is by Todd and out of Amiss, the dam of Phalla, 2:04½. You know that Phalla was the champion five-year-old pacing mare of last season, and is slated to go close to two minutes this year.

"But we have a two-year-old over here that will make all the boys take off their hats when they see him step. He is sired by Bingen, 2:06¼, and out of the well-known trotting mare Dolly Bidwell, 2:08½. Unless some accident happens to him there is no question of his filling a page of turf history in the future. Many a ride in an express car to the races is in store for him. I guess yes!"

HARNESS HORSE NOTES.

The latest quotation of the betting on the Checkers-Welshman match race is 5 to 4 in favor of the former, with the favorite the most in demand. This forenoon an offer of $200 against $160 was allowed to go begging, none of the Welshman party caring to place any more money at the odds, thinking possibly the betting later would drop to at least 3 to 2 in favor of Checkers.

Fred J. Brand, former president of the Dorchester Driving Club, while driving with his wife, was smashed into by an automobile and left high and dry by the side of the roadway. Both were badly bruised by their fall, and there was not enough left of the carriage to bother carrying away. The pacing gelding Joe Tranby, 2:17½, was cut up considerably in the fracas.

Trainer John Young will bring down a stable of the Allen Farm youngsters to Readville a little later on. He has several that can march right sharp.

COLLEGE GAMES TO-DAY.

Dr. Weinstein on Ailments of Men

The man who neglects a Genito-Urinary disease is like a man with a millstone around his neck.—I. Weinstein, M. D.

Some men allow pride to overcome their good sense when attacked by one of the many more or less dangerous genital diseases until the opportunity of "a stitch in time" has passed.

When the thoughtful man stops to consider that the result of neglecting to undergo prompt treatment will be not merely a minor development of the local disorder, but a weakening of the entire nervous system, impoverishment of the blood (if not blood poison itself) and a steady, insidious drain on the brain, he will take no chances. The question is: "To whom shall I go?" The only safe and sane thing to do is to go to a doctor whose reputation is beyond question.

MANY YEARS' SUCCESSFUL PRACTICE

is the record of Dr. Weinstein, specialist in private diseases of men.

His commodious offices are equipped with every medical appliance essential to the successful treatment of all forms of private diseases—no hospital could be more so. If you are suffering from any of the following ailments—no matter of how long standing—Dr. Weinstein invites you to call at his office for a confidential talk. He will make no exaggerated claims, nor promise you anything that he cannot fulfil to the letter. Among the diseases successfully treated by Dr. Weinstein by the thousands may be mentioned: Nervous Debility, partial or complete Lost Vitality, Nervous Dyspepsia, Paralysis, Piles, Fistula, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Stricture, Blood Poisoning and all contracted diseases.

CREDITORS SHY AT PROMISES AND PRAYERS

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, April 20.—Four indignant business men met last night D. Herbert DeMoranville, the man who made the astounding confession that he had defrauded them three years ago by placing property in his wife's name when every one thought he was bankrupt. DeMoranville had announced that "the Lord had commanded" him to make restitution to those he had cheated. The four creditors left the meeting with clenched fists and expressions of contempt. They were: Amos T. Caswell, John Harrison, Amos Horsfall and Elbert Bassett.

"His confession is all very fine,' said one of the creditors after the conference, which had proven very unsatisfactory.

"What we want is our money, not hot air. And there appears to be no chances of our getting anything more than the latter," he added.

It is claimed that DeMoranville's wife has not shown any earnest desire to turn over the property her husband declares he placed in her name to save a part of his fortune when the business world thought he was dead broke.

"Supposing your wife fails to see your plan in the same light as you do, what then?" inquired Creditor Harrison.

"We will have to pray and trust in the Lord to give her the right light for that," DeMoranville is said to have replied. Mrs. DeMoranville will not discuss the mater.

20,000,000 IN RUSSIA FACING FAMINE DEATH

LONDON, April 20.—Writing from the Russian famine district, Dr. Kennard, who was sent by the Society of Friends to investigate conditions among the peasantry, draws an appalling picture of the suffering. After calling attention to the urgent and immediate need of funds, he says:

"This is the worst famine Russia has known. No less than 20,000,000 people, distributed throughout the southeastern provinces, cannot live without aid to see another harvest, and I may say that this figure has been not only approved by the Zemstvo organization, but also by the government itself.

"The few cows that are in existence are in such a pitiful condition themselves that they are useless for milking purposes. The result is that babies and young children are being forced to eat the coarse black bread and the indigestible young cucumbers which are luxuries to the adult Russian peasant to-day, but are death to the baby, or at any rate spell disease."

UNIONS HIT AT MACHINE BILL

HAVERHILL, April 20.—Resisting strong outside pressure that had been brought to bear, Shoe Council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union last night voted to demand that the local members of the Legislature vote against the shoe machinery bill. This marks the end of a long struggle over the bill in the local unions, several of which have previously declined to express any opinion on the measure. The Shoe Council represents all factories of the city.

LOSES WIFE'S AFFECTIONS, SO WANTS $10,000

WORCESTER, April 20.—Asserting that Andrew G. Stanhope, a prominent and wealthy real estate man of this city, has alienated the affections of his wife, Perley E. Eames, an expert mechanic of No. 81 Austin street, has brought suit against Stanhope for $10,000, and the suit is scheduled to be heard at the next session of the Superior Court. Mr. Stanhope has engaged counsel and intends to fight the charge of Mr. Eames, who alleges that $10,000 as balm is little enough, compared with the havoc wrought in his home.

Both men are prominent in Worcester, and each has a wide circle of acquaintances, who are taking sides in the matter. Mr. Stanhope has a flourishing real estate business, with offices in the State Mutual building, and is a member of several clubs.

Mr. Eames is not so prominent, but he is one of the most expert mechanics in the city. He has been married a number of years, and until the present estrangement his domestic relations were apparently happy.

Mrs. Eames is talented and attractive. Since the court proceedings began she has left her husband's home and is in seclusion.

BIG BARGAINS THIS WEEK

The Best Pianos New and Second Hand

Don't get the impression that only second-hand pianos can be had at these sales. As a matter of fact, we sometimes sell the entire stock of new Pianos of some small Piano Trust Dealer, who through force of circumstances was obliged to "shut up shop," store his stock and finally let it go. We have in the course of a year hundreds of new Trust Pianos that in the "course of events" come up in the salesrooms to be sold and always at a sacrifice.

We would advise you to make up your mind to buy your Piano as soon as circumstances will allow you. Some weeks there are not enough Pianos in the lot to last through Saturday, and we do not take any from the accounts for sale until Mondays—People who get in and buy Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays get tremendous bargains—Every Piano is tuned by our expert and is at concert pitch before coming into our salesroom—We let no Piano go out before being assured of its excellent condition.

A Workhorse Parade—Good, Excellent

Why Not Also WORKMEN, and Especially WORKWOMEN, Parades?

Every Memorial Day in Boston, for some years, we have had a workhorse parade. They are going to have such a parade in New York very soon, and there will be others doubtless in other parts of the country.

The workhorses must look happy and fat in order to gain a prize.

The OLDER the horse, the more apt he is to get a prize, IF HE LOOKS HAPPY AND IS REALLY FAT AND IN GOOD CONDITION.

The harness can be plain and old, the horse need not be a high-bred or a fancy animal to win a prize, BUT HE MUST BE A HAPPY HORSE, ONE THAT HAS EVIDENTLY HAD A GOOD LIFE, been kindly treated.

All men love to win prizes. It is part of that gambling instinct so strong in savages and still surviving in us. Many a man in towns where they have a workhorse parade is unusually kind to the patient beast that he drives. He spares the whip for fear of marks that might interfere with winning the prize. He fixes and pads the collars carefully on the tired shoulders, that the horse may not get "sweenied" by unnecessary strain. He arranges the harness saddle on the back to prevent galling. He gives his horse a chance for comfort, hoping that he will get the prize.

Couldn't somebody start a parade for work MEN and work WOMEN on the same lines as the work HORSE parade?

Wouldn't it be a good idea to have a parade with good prizes, AND GIVE THE PRIZE TO THE EMPLOYER OR OWNER OF THE OLDEST PARADING WORKINGMAN OR WORKINGWOMAN, PROVIDING THAT WOMAN OR MAN LOOKED FAT AND HAPPY?

Wouldn't it be a good thing to have this workingmen and workingwomen parade, and give prizes to the employer or owner that should show among his workmen and workwomen the greatest PERCENTAGE of healthy, contented, happy human beings?

Of course, the narrow chest of the sweatshop couldn't get a prize. And the wan face of the woman compelled to work just before and just after her child is born would fail to get a prize.

And the pitiful old man, with the gray hairs smeared with a cheap dye, BECAUSE CAPITAL WON'T EMPLOY OLD LABOR, would be refused any kind of a prize and would be put out of the ranks.

Men that stoop from too long hours on the machine couldn't win prizes for their owners, either.

And girls paid so little they cannot afford to buy decent food to eat would be turned away from the parade for lack of red blood in their veins. Their owners would miss the prize.

AND, OF COURSE, YOUNG CHILDREN WOULD NOT BE ADMITTED AT ALL. IT WOULD BE A PRIZE ONLY FOR WORKMEN and WORKWOMEN. The work CHILD would be barred, for any judge accustomed to judging a horse show or a horse parade wouldn't for a moment permit a young foal to be taken out of the pasture and put to work with its soft bones and muscles, and such a judge would never give a prize to a child employed where a HORSE would NOT be employed.

We submit to charitable men who have prizes to give this idea of a parade with prizes for workingmen and workingwomen.

They might have the parade for the horses in the morning and the human beings in the afternoon.

Thus far nothing has prevented men from grinding their fellows down as far as possible, working them as hard as possible, sweating the men and the women and the little children.

Perhaps a parade with suitable prizes might impel them to do from vanity, or the gambling instinct of getting a prize, what they won't do because of the feeble arguments that those that work for them are their brothers and sisters.

Is There Any Food in Alcohol?

If Not, Here Is a Chance for the Scientists

We are told by good people, and by some of the scientists, that alcohol has no value as a food.

We know that recently the United States Government has passed the "Denatured Alcohol bill." This allows anybody who chooses, under certain restrictions, to manufacture alcohol for fuel and other industrial purposes, and sell it without any Government tax.

Out of the grain that is fed to cattle, pigs, horses, etc., in this country, there could be made enough alcohol to run endless machinery, and all the automobiles.

If this amount of denatured alcohol were produced, Mr. Rockefeller's gasoline and kerosene extortion might end. THE FARMER'S INCOME WOULD BE ENORMOUSLY INCREASED.

The question is, COULD THE ALCOHOL BE TAKEN OUT OF THE CORN, WHEAT, AND RYE, AND OATS THAT THE ANIMALS EAT WITHOUT HURTING THE FOOD QUALITY OF THE GRAIN?

If there is no food in alcohol, then the grain ought to be just as good for the animals, or even better, after the alcohol has been taken out of it. And science ought to find some way of removing the alcohol and leaving everything else for the animal to eat.

Our own idea is that nature knows even more than a Prohibitionist, and that the alcohol in its undistilled condition in grain is an essential part of that grain as a food, if only as a stimulant to digestion. Those who think that alcohol is useless have a chance to make interesting experiments, and perhaps to give every farmer a chance to get the full value of his grain in the shape of alcohol and still have the whole thing left to feed to his animals.

It would be an interesting and isolated case of "having your cake and eating it." We honestly believe it is worth the attention of men who know how to invent things and who have perseverance.

Little Editorials from the People

WAS COLUMBUS A MURDERER?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Ambrose Bierce in the April Cosmopolitan says: "Columbus was a pirate by trade, with neither scientific knowledge, nor scientific imagination. He learned about the land beyond the sea from the charts of a man whom he murdered. As an idol before which to execute characteristic facts of Anthropolatry, he is as good as another, but in reality, he was one of the greatest rascals of his time, and an impostor to boot."

Is there any foundation for this remarkable statement that Columbus murdered a man to secure the charts giving information of the land beyond the sea? It is not mentioned in the history of Ferdinand and Isabella. There is no record of it in E. Benjamin Andrews' "History of the United States." These are two standard authorities on the character of Columbus, and neither accuse the great discoverer of the crime of murder.

I have always looked on Columbus as a wonderful man, possessed of unbounded enthusiasm, courage and perseverance and cannot accept Mr. Bierce's verdict that Columbus was guilty of murder and a rascal and imposter.

About the time of Columbus piracy was a common form of trade, winked at by "Law," much on the same principle that, in certain sections of America, child labor is favored and encouraged to-day.

In the spirit of fair play to the dead, will you give us your views on the accuracy of this statement of Mr. Bierce?

Julia Ward Howe

By Charles Fleischer

WITH all due respect to the occupants of the White House, "the first lady of the land" lives in Boston.

She is Julia Ward Howe, America's Grand Woman.

No, I did not even feel the temptation to insert the adjective "old" in order to make the phrase correspond with Gladstone's title, "Grand Old Man."

Mrs. Howe belongs to the company of the perpetually youthful. Those whom the gods love they bathe in an ethereal amber which keeps them always young.

It was altogether proper that, at the great Peace Conferences in New York this week, the voices of the women should be heard. They are the chief sufferers from war and are therefore most concerned in the establishment of peace.

Mrs. Howe could not herself be present in New York, but she appeared in spirit in the letter in which she wrote. Addressing her fellow-women, she said:

> "Do not let us go back from what we have gained. Let us, on the contrary, press ever forward in the light of the new knowledge, of the new experience.
>
> "The women's colleges and the women's clubs have had everything to do with the great advance which we see in the moral efficiency of our sex. These two agencies have been derided and decried, but they have done their work.
>
> "If we have rocked the cradle, if we have soothed the slumbers of mankind, let us be on hand at their great awakening, to make steadfast the peace of the world."

That was a word worthy of the women of America and of their great leader, a sentiment quite befitting the poet whose eyes have always "seen the glory of the coming of the Lord."

During her single lifetime, Mrs. Howe, whose chief interest has been in the progress of women, has had the joy of seeing her sex advance further in social position, in social usefulness and influence than in all the previous history of mankind.

And she has played a large part in promoting that progress. No wonder that she says in that same letter, with unconscious autobiography speaking for her sex and herself:

> "In less than half a century the conscience of mankind has made its greatest stride toward the central of human affairs."

If women only realized it, they have it practically in their power, with their moral might and their spiritual control over the minds of men, to establish and preserve peace on earth.

Rocking the cradle, rearing the children, soothing the slumbers, ever the guardian angels, the moral teachers and the cultivators of our spiritual sense, women hold in their hands the pacific destiny of the human race.

However, I did not mean herewith to indulge myself in a preachment on peace and on the power of women, but merely I wanted to call attention to the words of the leader herself and to let these prove Mrs. Howe still America's Grand Woman.

Daybreak

THERE was a mighty battle at the dawn
'Twixt Wind and Sun about the Blushing Day,
Great cloud battalions uniformed in gray
Rushed at the Wind's command and charged upon
The flaming banners of the fortressed foe.
The sea grew hoarse in shouting for the Wind;
Yet with each fresh onslaught cloud ranks were thinned
By shining arrows flying from the bow
Of the still hidden enemy.

Once more
Sped forth those fiery darts; and then the ranks
Of spent clouds dropped upon the morning's banks;
And all the skies ran crimson with their gore.
The vanquished Wind fled o'er the fields away,
And the proud Sun rose up to claim the Day.

Dinkelspiel on Housecleaning

BY GEORGE V. HOBART

HOME—NOW.

MEIN LIEBER LOOEY—Ve haf receifed your letter from Eau Claire, Michigan, und your mother made a choke abould it ven she set, "Ach! Looey is now in Chocolate Eclair, und I suppose to-morrow he vill leave for Charlotte Russy."

All der neighbors got eggscited und called around to inkvire abould dis leedle vittikism, Looey, because it was such a great surprise to eferybody to know dot your mother makes a choke vich could get itself laughed at.

Ve vas all vell at home, mit der eggsception dot your mother has begun der Sprink housecleaning, und ven I ain't busy falling ofer a roll of carpet somevere I vas chenerally to be found in a death struggle unter der stairs mit der carpet-sveeper or der hallrack, vich has crept upon me unavares und gafe me der jewish jitsu.

Ach, Looey, your mother has a bitter wendetta against der microbe family, und to efery cherm she is a special meeting of der Black Hand.

All ofer der house, Looey, dare vas nudding but eggscitement und soapsuds.

All der day long der brooms und der fedder dusters vas flying ofer der household, und many a insect vich t'ought he hat a Summer residence und a meal ticket for life unter our carpet is now a ouldcast und a homeless vanderer.

All der pictures in der parlor haf been cofered mit cheesecloth so der flies doan'd use dem for autograph albums dis Summer.

You know dot preferred steel engraving of "Chorge Vashington Crossing Der Delavare" vich alvays hung py der door of der sitting room, Looey?

Vell, it ain'd dare no more.

To help mit der housecleaning your mother encaged a girl vich upon close eggsamination proved to be a Svede mitould any knowledge of der Enklish lankvich beyond such preliminary vords as "Prosit!" und "Gesundheit!"

Der full name of der girl vas Helga, but alvays in our hearts she vill live py der fairst syllabus of der name.

Anyhow, Looey, after your mother hat made signs mit der fingers und shouted at Helga for five minutes, der girl finally vent up der stepladder to bring down der picture of Chorge so she could get der dust off der river und make der ice look cool und refreshing for der Summer.

Helga vas eggstremely superstitious mit regards to der stepladder, und she approached it mit der same confidence in it dot a Russian Cheneral has in a bum-chell.

Up she vent mit all der enthusiasm of a sleepy snail, und yust ven Helga reached ould to get Chorge's picture der door bell rang und your mother hat to stop holding der stepladder und go to answer it.

Der stepladder started to vobbling und Helga started to yelling mit a Svedish accent dot listened like a forty-year-old newsboy trying to sell a fake eggstra.

She made a grab at der mouldering on der top of der vall, but der mouldering refused to associate mit her und Helga started on der downvard path.

Ven your mother got back to der room she found Helga mit her head unter der sofa, screaming for a Svedish doctor, vile der stepladder rested amusingly across her shoulders und kept her lashed to der mat.

Und den, ven your mother tried to coax der stepladder avay Helga began to kick mit both foots, vun of vich removed der t'ree-cornered hat from Chorge's head, und den, mit a Svedish shriek, she put her left foot through der Delavare River und spilled der ice all ofer der carpet.

It vas a bitter moment, Looey, but it only goes to proof vot dangers und perils surround us during der housecleaning times. Yours mit luff,

D. DINKELSPIEL,
Per George V. Hobart.
